J Majors Take Summer Work

Newspaper jobs throughout the state will be filled by journalism majors at the close of spring term, according to C. C. Webb, assistant professor of journalism and representative of the Newspaper Publishers of the West.

Graduates moving into fulltime employment include Jim Shea, Register-Guard in advertising; Donna Pastrouch, Myrtle Creek Mail in advertising; Sue Lichty, Pendleton East Oregonian in news; Lorna Davis, Condon Globe Times in news, and Helen Jones, Baker Democrat-Herald in news.

Students Accept Jobs

Journalism students who have been offered and have accepted summer work include Dick Carter, Medford Mail Tribune in advertising; Barbara Boushey, Medford Mail Tribune in news; Elsie Schiller, Hillsboro Argus in news; Jerry Harrell, Myrtle Creek Mail in news; Ron Miller, Heppner Gazette Times in news; Virginia Dailey, Register-Guard in news, and Bill Brandsness, a converted sophomore business major, Klamath Falls Herald News in advertising.

Fronie Bromley, freshman in journalism, will drop out of school for one year to work on the Albany Democrat Herald in news.

Webb is Go-Between

Webb acts as go-between for publishers in hiring students and students interested in being hired. Students do their own applying for positions, although Webb helps direct the original contact.

The approximate average wage of the jobs will be $53 weekly for fulltime employment and $48 weekly for summer work.

Red Cross Board Officers Appointed

New officers for the campus Red Cross board have been announced by out-going president Joan Walker. The officers will assume their duties next fall term.

Taking over as president is Mary Wilson and vice-president will be Carol Huggins. Other officers are Sally Ryan, secretary; Cynthia Long, treasurer; Janet Gustafson, and Donna Anderson, blood drive chairmen; June Browning, publicity; Gerry Porritt and Jim Dielschneider, disaster chairmen; Anne Starkweather and Phil Lewis, Roseburg project chairmen; and Gwen Zinninger, special events chairman.

Punch to Interview BAT Housemother

Mrs. Agnes Freep, housemother at the Beta Alpha Theta sorority, will be the interviewee on next Tuesday's edition of "Lemon Punch," according to Thorne Briar, KWAX announcer. The show, which is heard at 6:15 over KWAX, will be the last in this year's series.

Mrs. Freep, who will be leaving the BAT house after 30 years of service, will relate many of her experiences as a housemother. Actually, it will be 35 years for the lovable red-haired lady at Oregon.

As one of the charter members of Beta Alpha Theta, she enrolled at the University in 1917. Shortly after her graduation in 1921, and receiving her degree in fox farming, she married Ernstwhile Freep, a graduate student in geography.

It was not long after this that Mr. Freep went on a research trip to Tillamook—a journey from which he never returned. Since that time, Mrs. Freep has held down the housemother position.

As one of the girls at the BAT house expressed it, "We'll hate to see Mrs. Freep leave, although at times it will be a relief. She was always coming in after closing hours."

University Symphony Orchestra Sets Final Concert; Two Soloists Featured

The University symphony orchestra, directed by Edmund Cykler, professor of music, and George Boughton, associate professor of violin, and the choral union, directed by Donald Allton, assistant professor of music, will be presented in their final concert of the school year Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. in the music school auditorium.

Featured on the program will be two student soloists, violinist Larry Maves, junior, and organist June Orr, senior. Both were selected by audition last year for appearances with the orchestra.

Miss Orr will play "Organ Concerto, Opus 4, No. 5", by Handel and Maves will perform the "Third Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 61," by Camille Saint-Saens.

Making their only public appearance of the year, the choral union will sing Brahms' "Song of the Fates, Opus 89," accompanied by the orchestra.

"The number, with original text by Wolfgang Goethe, is a dramatic work full of the fateful foreboding of the mythical sisters who hold human fate in their fickle grasp," said Allton. He will direct both the chorus and orchestra on the final number.
