

Goes Both Ways

GEORGE SHAW, starting quarterback for Coach Len Casanova's University of Oregon Ducks, will be called on to do both offensive and defensive duties when the local eleven meets Nebraska this Saturday in a nationally-televised game from Lincoln, Neb. Shaw is a two year letter winner.

Emery Barnes, towering right end, will captain this year's Duck eleven through a loaded schedule starting at Nebraska Saturday night. "Big Em" led the thirty-eight man squad through a heavy offensive pass drill yesterday, 48 hours before take-off for the Cornhuskers opener.

Jack Patera played both offense and defense under the platoon system and should add valuable experience and ability to the center of the line.

The new NCAA substitution rule will divide football games into six quarters: 15, 11, and 14 minutes in length.

Hal Reeve, Oregon's work horse lineman, is one of the finest sixty minute players on the Pacific Coast. Oregon's coaches rate him as an outstanding tackle on the basis of his endurance, rugged blocking and stellar defensive accomplishments.

George Shaw is another player who has gone both ways. As a freshman he set an NCAA pass interception record with 13 passes picked off.
