

McClure Hall Remains Only Memory Now

The third oldest building on the University campus remains only in the memories of the chemistry and journalism students who studied there during its 52 years of existence.

Ivy-covered McClure hall has been torn down to make room for the new journalism building which is slated for completion next fall. McClure, the first permanent building ever to be torn down on the campus, was razed during the summer, and workmen are now engaged in excavating for the basement of the new building.

The old building was completed in 1900 to house the chemistry department and was dedicated by the class of 1901 to Edgar McClure, a young chemistry professor who was killed in a fall on Mt. Rainier three years earlier.

Facilities for 200

It was an imposing building . . . in 1900. It cost $28,000 to build and was equipped with nearly $7,000 worth of equipment, including laboratory facilities for 200 students.

In 1922 a new journalism building was constructed on the east end of McClure. Confusion reigned during the years when the journalism school set up a print shop in the basement of McClure, and the chemistry offices spread to the first floor of journalism.

The chemistry department deserted both buildings in 1952 to move into the new science building. Journalism took over, but McClure was doomed with the authorization of funds for the construction of the new journalism building.

The building which will rise on the site of McClure is being constructed at a cost of approximately $559,000, in bold contrast to the $28,000 cost of the original building.

Journalism to Use Quonsets

Until the new building is completed, the school of journalism have moved into the quonsets east of Commonwealth hall.

The razing of McClure, although the most obvious, is not the only change in the physical structure of the University since last spring.

The old frame building which last year housed the University's extension division has been torn down, and the area on Kincaid st. where the building was located will be seeded to lawn. The extension division has been moved to Emerald hall in the section previously occupied by the mathematics department which is now in Deady hall.

Renovation of the school of education and the old University high school building is now in progress. The school of education will take over both buildings when the work is completed the first of winter term.

Emerald Schedule Told for Term

With offices temporarily located in Deady quonset, the Oregon Daily Emerald today begins its regular five-day-a-week publication schedule for fall term.

Although today's paper is an eight-page paper, immediate plans call for a four-page daily for the rest of the term. The paper will be distributed on the campus before noon of each day, Monday through Friday.

Distribution spots for the Emerald will be:

- 1) Outside the main entrance of the Student Union;
- 2) Carson hall
- 3) John Straub cafeteria;
- 4) Outside the ticket booth at McArthur Court;
- 5) Outside the University Drug store, 11th and Alder streets;
- 6) The Co-op;
- 7) On the main quadrangle near the northwest corner of the Library.

Morris Heads Year's Changes

school of business administration be appointed acting president to serve from September 16 until a president can be selected."

"We expect to confirm this decision in our next official board meeting September 16."

Of the nominees for permanent president, the board said:

"Members of the board of higher education have given careful study to the credentials of some 20 nominees for the presidency of the University of Oregon. We also have studied the recommendations of the two faculty groups, the faculty advisory council and the board of deans. The list of nominees has been sufficiently narrowed and we expect to begin interviews in the next few weeks."

Confidence Appreciated

Morris stressed the fact that he is not a candidate for the permanent presidency in a statement issued following the decision of the board. In accepting the position, Morris declared "The confidence expressed in me by this appointment is very deeply appreciated. I am definitely not a candidate for the permanent presidency of the University. During whatever interim I am asked to serve I shall give the institution the very best of my thinking and my energy. The University is in excellent condition. The search is on for the best possible man to assume the permanent presidency and carry the school forward into still greater service to the state of Oregon."

"During the interim we will together strive to maintain our pace, meet whatever problems may arise and then welcome enthusiastically the next permanent president of the University."

Freshman B and Forms Today

An all-freshman band will be formed this week, and will play at the student assembly at MacArthur Court Wednesday night, according to Robert Vagner, associate professor of music.

The group will rehearse this afternoon at 4:30, and all prospective members are to contact either Vagner or I. D. Lee, instructor in brass instruments, at the music school as soon as possible.

The University Singers will begin auditioning for this year's new members in Music 207 this Friday from 11 to 12 noon and 1 to 5 p.m., and Saturday from 9 to 12 noon and 1 to 3 p.m. Membership this year will be limited to 40 regular members and 8 to 12 alternates.
