

English Professor Publishes Volume

"The Lifted Spur," a new volume of poetry by E. G. Moll, professor of English, was published in Sydney, Australia, in June.

The book, which contains 20 short poems and the long narrative "Jonah at Ninevah," has been submitted by the publisher for competition in England.

Born in Victoria, Australia, Moll has been publishing books of poetry since 1927. His "Cut from Mulga," published in 1940, was selected for publication under Australian subsidy by the Commonwealth Literary committee, which selects one book of significance in Australian letters for publication each year.

Although Moll has been a member of the University of Oregon faculty since 1929 most of his books have been published in Australia and much of his material has its origin in his native country.

Fitness Exams Tougher Now

Freshman men entering the University of Oregon this fall are being given much more extensive physical fitness tests than ever before, according to Arthur A. Esslinger, dean of the school of health and physical education.

A new type of testing has been introduced this fall under the direction of William P. Rhoda, assistant professor of physical education. The test, known as the physical fitness index, is done with the aid of an experienced consultant, H. Harrison Clarke, research professor of physical education, who comes from Springfield college in Massachusetts, has been brought to Oregon to develop the research program in the school of health and physical education.

Items in the testing program include grip tests; back, leg and arm muscle tests, and a lung capacity test. Following the tests the individual is scored on the basis of his age and weight.

The women's testing program this year remains the same as in previous years and follows a more general pattern with the objective of a greater scope of information. As in men's testing, the objective is to determine the needs of each student and then to proceed on an individualized program.

Dull, Baldinger Named As Museum Personnel

The State Board of Higher Education Wednesday confirmed the appointment of Paul S. Dull, associate professor of political science and history, as director of the University's Museum of Oriental Art, and the appointment of Wallace S. Baldinger, associate professor of art, as museum curator.

The two appointments establish a new administration pattern for the museum. As director, Dull will be in charge of all administrative phases, including the program and the budget. Baldinger will be responsible for the collection, classification and cataloguing of additional acquisitions.

Dull will carry out his work in addition to his regular teaching duties. Baldinger will be released from part of his work in the school of architecture and allied arts for the museum work.

Both Dull and Baldinger spent last year in Japan, doing research in their respective fields. Dull studied under grants from the Ford Foundation, the Social Science Research council, and the University. Baldinger was under a Fulbright grant.

Dull, who has been on the University faculty since 1946, has been associated with museum work through his classes in Oriental history and his work with the Far Eastern Studies curriculum.

Baldinger has also been associated with the museum, both in his teaching of Oriental art history and his work with the same curriculum.

J School Receives Prize Ad Entries

The University of Oregon school of journalism has been selected by the Direct Mail Advertising association to receive the prize-winning entries in the 1952 direct mail advertising competition for permanent file.

Included in the prize-winning entries are complete materials from the 60 best direct mail advertising campaigns for the past year, together with case histories of the campaigns. The material will be used by advertising students in the school to gain more knowledge of methods used in direct mail advertising methods.

The exhibit will be shown at the Multnomah hotel in Portland before being shipped to the University for permanent file.

The exhibit has been made available to the school of journalism by Abbott, Kerns and Bell, Portland printers and lithographers; Taylor and Company of Portland, and the Portland branch of Blake, Moffitt and Towne.

Sabine Announces New Course Plans

Sophomore majors in journalism will be able to take three upper division courses this year with the consent of instructors, according to Gordon A. Sabin, dean of the school of journalism.

The three courses offered to sophomores include mechanics of publishing, fall term; principles of advertising, winter term, and reporting, spring term.

This change in the journalism program is designed to give sophomores an earlier start in professional courses. The only other course open to freshmen and sophomores is introduction to journalism.

Talent Feature Due At SU Open House

A variety show featuring campus talent will highlight the Student Union's annual open house program tonight at 7.

The variety show, to be held in the fishbowl, will be followed by a showing of the University of Oregon production of "Hamlet," narrated by Patrick Henry and featuring Al Barzman as Hamlet and Bob Chambers as 10 other characters.

"Fishbowl Frolics," an informal, no-date mixer, will begin at 9 p.m.

Displays by the 10 SU committees will be on exhibit in the second floor lobby. Committee chairmen and members will be present to explain committee activities. A special feature of the open house will be the opening of the record lending library and a photography exhibit in the art gallery.

SU Office Space Open for Bidders

Any organization interested in office space in the Student Union may pick up petitions in SU 301 or 310.

Applications must be made by 9:00 a.m. Saturday for review by the board chairman previous to final decisions to be made by the board at its first meeting next Wednesday.

ROTC Staff Chosen

The list of appointments of new staff members in the military science department is headed by Col. Edwin Daily's selection to replace Col. Emery Bruns as head of the department. Daily is the head of the AFOTC.

New head of the Army ROTC is Lt. Col. Robley Evans, who succeeds Lt. Col. John Longdahl. Other appointments announced by the department include Lt. Col. Frederick Ward, Major Earl Ralf, and Capt. Harold Wolaver, all of the army department, to positions as assistant professors of military science and tactics.
