On Rush Week, Pledging

The most popular introductory phrase on campus, "And what's your major?" lapsed into obscurity for another year as jittery co-eds entered the house of their choice for pledge ribbons at an early breakfast.

It eased the whole situation to be greeted at the door with shrieks of those so recently freed from the strain of house cleaning, room decorating and selling themselves. The impressive contentment of preference night had changed into nail biting anguish for prospective pledges. The noise seemed to soothe the wobbling knees. (Besides, what is more highly recommended by psychology books than screaming to release an emotion?) (unless it is plate-throwing.)

Looking back over rush week, it fades into a maze of chit-chat, recommendations, new friends, discussion, evaluation, counseling, heart break, laughter and confusion.

The rushers knew what they wanted—the problem was to spot potential quickly and bring it out. Every rushee was a prospective rusher herself. How will she impress other people? Will she fit in? Is she sincere? Does she go out for activities, grades or titles?

And the rushees—what do they want in a house? Is it social standing? Big name? Companions? Just follow their friends?

The answers to "Why did you rush?" are as numerous and as varied as the rushees themselves. They include the above replies with emphasis placed according to the person. It always comes back to the individual.

The slightest courtesy extended a rushee—many times unwittingly—often is the deciding factor in choosing a house.

Rushing is a period of adjusting. With the 17 varieties offered women, one might believe rushing is a time of learning more about yourself in order to determine where you fit.

But in the handbooks, and from Panhellenic officers, the advice counselors are "advised" to give—the answer is rush and pledge. Get the pledge pin and then adjust seems to be the orthodox way into the Greek world.

From all this, it might be surmised that collegians can be happy and well-adjusted anywhere if they try. This includes in the Greek circle if they choose to pledge, or out of it, if they do not.

It adds up to the fact that if rushing is considered unimportant enough to be thrown in with orientation—as a sidelight—it should be cut down to appropriate size in the eyes of incoming freshmen.—(P.G.)

Greater Enrollment Brings Parking Fix

added that John Straub and Susan Campbell hall are the only dormitories that have a definite parking problem.

New Lot Planned

Work will begin immediately on a new parking area at 15th and Agate which will hold about 200 cars. The new lot will be constructed in the area formerly occupied by the trailers which housed married students. A permanent lot holding 109 cars will be built facing 15th ave. and a temporary lot holding about the same number will be built on Agate st. The temporary area will stay in use only until new tennis courts are constructed. However, most of the permanent lot may be used eventually by students living in the new men's dormitory addition.

The student traffic court will again enforce traffic regulations on the campus, and also plans to do some research work on the parking situation and offer suggestions to the administration.

Money taken in by the court from fines will be used to pay court expenses and finance the traffic court scholarships. Two scholarships of $165 each were awarded last year.

UT House Sales Start Today Noon

House sales of University theater season tickets will start today at noon with flying speeches in the living organizations, according to Ken Olsen, season ticket chairman.

The $5 season ticket entitles the holder to $7 worth of shows plus bonus attractions during the year.

House salesmen will be announced during the speeches. Students are reminded that the house with the largest percentage of season ticket holders are admitted free with a guest to any one University theater production, said Olsen.

The first attraction open only to season ticket holders will be the psychological drama "The Man," to be presented Friday and Saturday on the main stage.

Iran's Ex-Premier Sentenced to Hang

(AP) Former Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossadegh has been sentenced to be hanged, according to a report from a London newspaper.

The London Daily Express said last night that the 74-year-old politician was sentenced by an Iranian military court Tuesday.

Sportscasters Auditions Set

Auditions for students interested in announcing Oregon football games on state radio station KOAC will be held today from 3 to 5 p.m. in studio A, Villard hall.

Engineers, color men, spotters and announcers will be needed, according to E. A. Kretsinger, assistant professor of speech.

Broadcasts of the game, always called by professional announcers in the past, will begin Oct. 3.

O'Connell Wins State Bar Award

The third annual award given to a member of the Oregon State Bar who has rendered outstanding public service went to Kenneth J. O'Connell, professor of law.

O'Connell won the award for his work in connection with interesting the bar in statute revision in Oregon, and for serving as chairman of the Statute Revision Council. The award was made at a luncheon during the recent Oregon State Bar convention held at Gearhart, Ore.

Meeting Planned Thursday by IFC

The first Inter-fraternity council meeting of the term will be held at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Student Union, according to Con Sheffer, president of the group. This will also be the first meeting of the council under the newly-adopted rushing plan.

Rush week, scheduled to begin with an assembly Sunday evening, will be the main topic of discussion, reports Sheffer. Also on the agenda are the setting of house quotas and an IFC beach trip scheduled for this weekend.
