Washke Explains Football Rules To Intramural House Managers

Paul Washke, director of the University of Oregon's intramural program, officiated at a meeting of the intramural managers Thursday at 4 p.m. in the Physical Education building. The purpose of the meeting was to acquaint the managers with the rules of play, and also to clear up any questions that might have arisen.

The main part of Washke's discussion was taken up with the explanation of the manager's part in the intramural program, and also to go over the playing rules for their touch football program. Some time was also spent in explaining the part that the intramural office plays in the program.

Entries for the football section of the sports program closed last week, but there is still time to enter A and B volleyball teams. Managers were cautioned however that a B team may not be entered without first entering an A team. The deadline for handing in entries for the volleyball teams will be some time next week. The touch football schedule for next week follows.

Game over KASH

Twenty northwest radio stations will broadcast Saturday's football clash at Palo Alto. Eugene listeners will be able to pick up the broadcast over local station KASH. It will also be heard over KEX in Portland.

Jack Shaw, brother of Oregon's starting quarterback, will sportscast the game. Commentary will be by Ernie Smith. The game will be sponsored by Tide Water Associated Oil company.

Desk Editor: Bob Robinson; Staff: Jim Signor, Bruce Tennon, Sam Vahey.

Webfoot Gridders Venture South to Stanford Contest

A spirited and determined football squad from the University of Oregon departed for Palo Alto, Calif., last night, Thursday, for what could be one of their most important games of the season. Saturday afternoon these serious-minded proteges of Coach Len Casanova will lay all their chips on the table when they lock horns with Stanford's unpredictable Indians.

Although considered as just another ball game by most people, this encounter is much more than that for Oregon's Ducks. Last week the Webfoots surprised the whole nation with a convincing 20-12 victory over highly favored Nebraska. Immediately after their win people all along the Pacific coast began picking Oregon as the third best team in the PCC. Paul B. Williamson, noted football prognosticator, went so far as to name the Ducks as the 20th best team in the United States in his weekly ratings. It has been many years since so much acclaim has been heaped on an Oregon football team. Now, it is up to the Ducks to prove their wares. One game is hardly enough to judge whether or not a team has what it takes to be great but another win, over Stanford, would certainly erase the last shadow of a doubt as to the abilities of this Oregon eleven.

Entering the tussle in the unusual role of favorite Oregon will have no easy time with Stanford. Even though the Indians looked poor in losing to College of Pacific, 25-20, last weekend they should not be taken lightly. Ever since jovial Chuck Taylor took over the coaching reins they have played up and down football. One Saturday they look like champs and the next like chumps. If they are on they could give Oregon a rough afternoon.

In the final home practice Thursday afternoon before going south, Casanova ran his charges through a brief but important session. Defensive maneuvers, planned to stop Stanford's strong aerial attack, were stressed. Also the Ducks brushed up on their own passing game with George Shaw and Barney Holland doing the tossing.

Cecil Hodges, stellar Oregon fullback, was still practicing without pads and it is very doubtful if he will see much action Saturday. If Hodges is unable to play he will probably be replaced by Dean Van Leuven.

Marciano TKO's La Starza in 11th

NEW YORK (AP) Heavyweight Champion Rocky Marciano battered challenger Roland LaStarza into a bloody mass in the eleventh round of their championship bout at New York Thursday night and as a result won, convincingly, by a TKO.

LaStarza, who had been seeking a rematch with the Brockton Bully-Boy for more than 3 years, took a fearful beating before referee Ruby Goldstein stopped the bout at one minute 31 seconds of the eleventh.
