The recording was made during the recent Shakespearean festival in Ashland by Don Hunter, head of the audio-visual department. Mrs. Ottilie Seybolt, associate professor of speech, will comment on the Elizabethan songs presented in the program. Mrs. Seybolt spent the 1951-52 school year in England and visited many places associated with Shakespeare's writings.

Along with the concert presented at Ashland, the audience will see a typical banquet scene of Shakespeare's time where the King and court were entertained by this type of music.

Dialogue for the production was taken from plays by Shakespeare, Nicolas Udall, Thomas Dekker, John Fletcher and Thomas Heywood.

Music by Thomas Morley, John Dowland and Adrea Gabrieli, and lyrics from several of Shakespeare's plays are included in the recording.

The famous old ballad "Greensleeves" is presented as the finale using the tune which Shakespeare knew.
