Open World Subject Of Next Assembly

"America and an Open World" will be the topic of the lecture by Max Lerner, noted author, teacher and journalist, Tuesday at 1 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

The Lerner lecture will be the second University assembly of the year, and will feature a speaker who is currently professor of American civilization at Brandeis university, Waltham, Mass., and a columnist for the New York Post.

He is now working on a new book, "America as a Civilization," which deals with national traditions, America as a world leader and the pattern of American life.

He has also published books dealing with politics, international affairs, economics, ethics and other areas of the American scene. His best known books are "It Is Later Than You Think," and "Ideas Are Weapons." "Actions and Passions," his most recent book, is a collection of essays published in 1949 by Simon and Schuster.

A world traveler, Lerner has served as a war correspondent in Germany, has reported Labor Party conferences from England, international conferences from Paris, new developments from Yugoslavia, and the formation of a new state and society from Israel.

Lerner was educated at Yale and has taught at Sarah Lawrence, Harvard and Williams.

Swamp Girls Meet Tonight

The first interviews for the "Swamp Girl of Sigma Phi Epsilon" will be held at the Sig Ep house tonight, according to Dave Todd, social chairman.

The candidates, one from each sorority pledge class, women's cop, Hendricks hall, Hendricks annex and three from Carson hall, will be entertained at a buffet dinner at 5 this evening, Todd said.

The five finalists will be honored at the "Swamp Stomp," Nov. 7, when the announcement of the "Swamp Girl of Sigma Phi Epsilon" will be made.

The candidates, who are to wear campus clothes, will be picked up at their respective living organizations, reports Alan Opplinger, president.

Matrix Speaker Sets Autograph Session Today

Sister Mary Gilbert, featured speaker for Tuesday's Matrix Table banquet and author of "Springs of Silence," will be autographing copies of her book at Russell's department store from 2 to 4 this afternoon. She will also autograph books following her talk Tuesday.

Reservations for the Matrix Table, scheduled for Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom, can no longer be taken, according to Kitty Fraser, president of Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalism honorary.

The honorary traditionally holds a Matrix banquet each year to honor women in journalism and letters. A feature of the banquet will be the announcement of four Women of Achievement who will be honored because of their service and activities.

One University woman will be honored in addition to a woman from Eugene and two from Oregon newspaper work.

JOHN BROWN'S BODY

Doors Open 7:15

ANNE BAXTER
Phi Beta Pledge?

Doors open at 7:15 tonight at McArthur court for the production of "John Brown's Body" starring Anne Baxter, Raymond Massey and Tyrone Power.

The performance, done in a dramatic reading style, will begin at 8. The doors of the auditorium will be closed at this time and no one will be allowed to enter until intermission, according to Donna Buse, Student Union program director.

While here, Power will participate in a ceremony this afternoon which will make him an honorary member of National Collegiate Players, according to Clarence Suiter, president of the campus chapter.

Plans have also been tentatively made to make Anne Baxter an honorary member of Phi Beta, national music and speech honorary. Pat Hartley, University chapter president, stated that confirmation had not yet been received from Miss Baxter, but expressed confidence that she will accept.

KWAX was forced to cancel plans for a broadcast interview with the stars when a letter was received stating that the cast will not make any additional public appearance in Eugene. The show will be produced in Portland Tuesday and Wednesday.

UT Show Tickets Start Sale Today

The University Theater ticket sales this term have reached a new mark with sales past the 2000 mark, according to Mrs. Gene Wiley, theater business manager. The sale of the tickets will continue through Oct. 31.

The box office opens today for "See How They Run," the first production. Season tickets will be available at the box office when patrons obtain their seats.

Individual tickets will be available for the first performance. The additional number of season tickets sold means that there will be fewer seats available to the general public in an individual admission basis for the six scheduled productions, Mrs. Wiley warns.

"See How They Run" is a British farce by Phillip King. The three-act comedy played to packed houses throughout its run in London.

USN Band To Play At Mac Court Soon

Thursday at 8 p.m. the United States Navy band will present a concert in McArthur court.

Reserved seats sell for $1.80 and are now on sale at the athletic ticket office in McArthur court, Eugene Music Co., Wilson Music Co and Graves Music. General admission tickets sell for $1.20 and may be purchased at McArthur court.

The Navy band is composed of nearly 100 musicians. Their director, Lieutenant Commander Charles Brender, has conducted the band since 1941. Under his direction the band has performed before audiences throughout the United States, Alaska, Puerto Rico, Panama, Jamaica, Haiti, and the Virgin Islands.

Readings Set For Richard II

The first readings for William Shakespeare's "Richard II" will be held in Villard 201 Tuesday at 4 and 7:30 p.m., Mrs. Otilie T. Seybolt, director announced today. The play provides a variety of parts, many short and some long.

This is a reading of the play, not a casting, Mrs. Seybolt said. The major reason for the readings now is to acquaint Mrs. Seybolt with those who have an interest in the play and those interested in Richard II. Anyone who is interested but unable to come Tuesday should contact Mrs. Seybolt and arrange for an interview.

All those who read are asked to bring a copy of the play, which is available in the University library. Readers should pay special attention to the following scenes: Act 1, scenes 1 and 3 for the court characters, act 1, scene 2 for Gaunt and the Duchess of Gloucester; act 1, scene 4 for Richard, Bajor, Green and Bushy and Aumerle; act 2, scene 2 for the queen and act 3, scene 4 for the queen, ladies and gardeners. If any individuals have favorite passages to read, an opportunity to do so will be given.

Oregon Party Set-up Object of Criticism

The state of Oregon in particular, as well as the nation as a whole, now operates strictly on a "one-party system, due to the dominance of money in political campaigns," according to State Senator Richard L. Neuberger, speaking on campus in several class sessions.

The voting public is "sold dominant candidates just like soap, or any other commodity," said the senator, "through political propaganda that drowns the other candidates."

Neuberger blames the reason for the amount of money spent by the Republican party in campaigning on the fact that the Republicans are more susceptible to influence from special interests, using the specific example of power companies.

Speaking on this issue here in Eugene, Neuberger addressed the Lane County Hell's Canyon association Friday night on the subject of power policies, talking against the McKay policies.

Neuberger stressed his point of the influence money has in campaigns many times, saying at one point that "advertising agencies, figuratively speaking, run political campaigns in the United States." He expressed the belief that if there were less money to spend on campaigning the candidates would be forced to hold better, "more personal" campaigns.

"I do not favor socialized medicine," the senator said in answer to a student question following his address. When questioned further about the so-called trends toward socialization that it was a part of, he merely said that "such socialism charges are unfair." He expressed sympathy with the program of government operation of large power companies, however.

Neuberger was asked about Ex-Governor McKay's activities in Washington, and commented that "McKay is acting the same on national issues as he did here in Oregon, but he's in a bigger league now."

"The Republicans have gotten away with many things, here in Oregon, that should have been political suicide but weren't," he added in answer to a student's view of Republican policies in this state.

Summarizing his views of the one-party control, the senator concluded his address by stating that "any party completely in power, without investigation or opposition, becomes indifferent to responsibilities, and is controlled by special interests."

Cohen Announces Debate Meeting

University debaters will meet Tuesday night at 7:30 in Villard 205, according to Herman Cohen, debate coach and instructor in speech. Students interested in competitive debate are invited to observe a practice debate on the intercollegiate debate topic of free trade that evening, Cohen said.

First activity on this fall's for- ensic slate is the non-competitive Willamette Valley Institute at Oregon State college on Oct. 31. The squad will travel to Pullman, Wash. to enter the annual Northwest Regional Meet for their first competition of the season Nov. 20 and 21.

President's Job Stays Vacant

The Saturday morning meeting of the State Board of Higher Education proved indecisive, at least as far as the public is concerned, upon the selection of a new president for the University. Victor P. Morris, acting president of the University, and Hoyt Trowbridge, chairman of the faculty advisory council, were both interviewed shortly by the board.

Both Morris and Trowbridge have already filed written statements with the board containing the views of the groups which they represent toward the three men being considered for the presidency.

If the board reached any decision, it was not made public. Presumably there are three possibilities arising from the meeting: first, that the board and the faculty groups prefer the same man, making it possible for the board to offer him the presidency and announce his appointment at the Oct. 27 board meeting.

Other possible actions would result if the person selected rejects the job. Should another of the three men interviewed be acceptable, he could also be offered the job. If the second man is not acceptable to the board or faculty groups or if he rejects the position, the board could call for more interviews.

The board announced earlier that no decision upon the three candidates, whose names have not been disclosed, would be made before the next regular board meeting, Oct. 27.

Faculty Women Schedule Tea

The Newcomers group of the Women's Faculty club will have its first tea of the year Tuesday from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Alumni lounge of Gerlinger hall.

Speakers for the program tea will be Ray Hawk, associate director of student affairs, and Fred Benne, manager of the Eugene Chamber of Commerce.

New members are particularly invited to attend, according to Mrs. William A. Williams and Mrs. Matteo Salemi, co-chairmen. The program for the year will be discussed.

Rescue Truck Here Today

A DEFENSE TRUCK (above), used in training rescue personnel throughout the state, will be open for inspection on campus from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. today. The truck, owned by the Oregon Civil Defense agency, serves as a model for local directors.
