What's Wrong With Oregon?

What's the matter with Alpha hall? Well, what's the matter with Oregon? Several events of fall term call for an internal look at our university and the underlying causes of that explosion at Straub last week.

What's the matter with Alpha? Why, we don't need men in our university dormitories "that can be led around by the nose." What we need is a bunch of strong-headed, stubborn individualists that refuse to conform to the smallest part of the social and activity program at Oregon. What we need is free thinkers who are so involved in gnawing over their own little tidbit on the platter of life that they refuse to grant tolerance, let alone attempt to understand or gain something from the activities and interests of other students.

We don't need cooperation on our campus. What we need is water bags and fisticuffs to end our car parades and serapades. What we need is boos and catcalls and a shrug of the shoulders to indicate that men in the dorms never do anything.

We don't need consideration of others on the university campus. But what we do need is bigger and better car parades honking around at 11 o'clock at night, interfering with attempts to study or sleep or be quietly sick in the infirmary.

Oh, what we really need is two fighting factions—one that can't see any good in any campus activity and one that evaluates college life on the criteria of how loud the yells are at a football game or how many students will stomp around Carson, promoting their candidate for the top personality kid contest.

We don't need student government on campus. We don't need or want respect for college leaders. What we want are students who won't vote in college elections so they'll get started in the right direction to play their part in a democratic life. What we need is a majority of students who don't think student government accomplishes a thing, so they'll stay home on election day and let the activity boy or girl with her eye on a Mortar Board jacket get elected by their friends.

We don't need a chance in college to learn the social customs of our nation, learn to know people—all kinds of people with every kind of interest and every outlook on life. We don't need the broadening influence that a college can provide to assure a fuller, richer life as adults.

We have a choice of one or two things. We either need to spend four years of college living sitting in the library or we need four years of carousing and marching up and down with torches, and screaming our heads off in car parades. We don't need a sensible outlook on two extremes of college life. We need a lot of words and as little thought as possible. And we've got it. (E.S.)

Education First

Emerald Editor:

Alpha hall is a men's dormitory that borders on the Carson hall quadrangle. It does not border on Times Square at high noon nor center in the middle of a three-ring circus.

The men of Alpha believe in education first, activities second. When something disturbs that policy, there is friction.

Alpha hall, home of the "Alphaholics," has the top grade average of the men's living organizations. And its "Alphaholics" are ready to actively back almost any worthwhile campus activity. Currently, they are planning for the forthcoming noise parade.

However, they feel that the unusually high number of recent car parades, torch-light processions, and brass bands at hours of eleven and twelve at night are unnecessary functions and without justification (as well as being in open violation of University ruling on quiet hours). Because of these things, and with due respect for study, the "Alphaholics" have taken the only effective course available to them in methods of retaliation.

Dental Students' Applications Due

Application blanks for the University of Oregon dental school in Portland are now available to University students who wish to enter dental college next year.

The application, which should be submitted as soon as possible and well before March 15, are now available in Science 121.

Lindstrom Cites Housing Problem

Housing for married students is now a problem which every university and college, including the University of Oregon, must answer, according to J. Orville Lindstrom, business manager of the University.

Lindstrom reported in an interview recently that although the Amazon project will be gone in several years, the University has tentative plans for new married students' housing.

Lindstrom, one of the members of the planning commission of the University, said that the probable place for the new housing would be on the north side of 15th St. between Columbia and Moss. Five or six story brick-faced apartment houses are being considered.

He said that there was a need for low cost housing for students and temporary housing for the faculty. He emphasized that the faculty should be given temporary housing only, so that the University will not be competing with private business unnecessarily.

There are some dwellings the University has bought east of the campus in anticipation of expansion, and which it rents to private parties. Lindstrom stressed that the rents of these homes were the prevailing rates and that the University paid taxes on these houses as would any private owner.

Music Philibuster Planned Thursday

Phi Beta, national professional music and speech fraternity for women, is sponsoring its "Philharmonic Philibuster" Thursday at 4 p.m. in Gerlinger hall.

The coffee hour will be open to all students in speech and music. Dr. Roy C. McCall, head of the department of speech, will address the instructors and students.

YMCA Offers Church Visits

Petitions for committee members to work on the YMCA-sponsored "visit to churches" project are now being received in the YM office in the Student Union.

According to chairman Danny Gano, junior in liberal arts, the purpose of the project is to explore the history and beliefs of the churches to be visited during the project. Both men and women are eligible to petition, Gano said.

11 Receive Treatment At Infirmary Monday

Eleven students, three women and eight men, were in the infirmary Monday. The majority were being treated for upper respiratory infection.

Those "on the sick list" were Mary Waddell, Mary McAleer, Julie Beaubier, Ron Lyman, Richard Lawson, Raleigh Meyer, Gordon Ross, Robert Scearce, Alex Byler and John Brandt.

Williams to Lecture On American Jazz

A concert-lecture entitled "American Jazz—Alabama to Chicago" will be held in the Student Union Peter Benson Howard music listening room Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., according to Martha Spatz, SU recorded music committee chairman.

The lecture will be given by W. A. Williams, assistant professor of history.
