'BABY, IT'S WET OUTSIDE'

Many Roads Closed As Rivers Overflow

Heavy rains in Eugene and vicinity have caused many Oregon students to alter plans about leaving Eugene for the Thanksgiving holiday.

Many roads leading from Eugene were under water or closed by slides caused by the heavy rains during the weekend. However, the immediate flood danger in the Eugene area passed Monday, according to the local weather bureau, since only intermittent light rains are expected here today and tomorrow.

99E Closed

Highway 99E, north to Portland, was closed Monday night between Junction City and Harrisburg because of high water. However, highway 99W, north, was still open to traffic Monday night, according to the state police. The Willamette river in this area was expected to crest at 10 a. m. today.

Travelers were reported able to reach Grants Pass on highway 99 south although parts of the road were under water. However, the highway from Grants Pass to Medford and from there to Klamath Falls was closed to passenger cars.

Only emergency traffic was being allowed on highway 58, east of Eugene, because of a washout at McCredie Springs, three miles east of Oakridge.

Travelers to California were advised by the state police department to take either highway 126 or the South Santiam to Bend and then highway 97 south. Highways 101, along the coast, was closed by high water from Coos Bay to Coquille and at Port Orford and Gold Beach.

Coast Isolated

Highways 42, between Roseburg and Coquille, 38, from Eugene to Reedsport, and 36, to Florence from Eugene, were also reported closed by the state police.

Although many of the routes out of Eugene were threatened by high water, slides or washouts, no major means of transportation from the city had been curtailed as of Monday night.

Buses were still running as near to schedule as possible, although many of them were being re-routed in order to avoid high water when possible. One local bus station reported that no regularly scheduled bus had been cancelled yet by Monday and officials expected to continue regular service.

Trains Delayed

Local railroad stations said that no trains from Eugene had been cancelled, but several were being delayed by slides. Airplanes were leaving on schedule Monday and no cancellations were expected today because of weather.

In Eugene itself, residents were aware of the results of the heavy weekend rains. City maintenance men were plagued by plugged storm sewers causing water to back up in gutters and intersections.

Race Gates Closed

Gates to the Millrace were closed Sunday to keep water from backing up and flooding lawns along the stream.

The McKenzie river at Coburg was reported to have crested at 15.3 feet and was falling Monday night. At 8 p. m. Monday, it had reached 14.4 feet.

The Willamette crested at 10.1, two feet below flood stage, and had fallen to 8.8 by Monday night. It was also expected to continue to fall today.

Dual Title Roles Set for Richard II

Don Van Boskirk and Karl Harshbarger, seniors in speech, have been double cast in the title role of "Richard II," announced Ottilie T. Seybolt, who will direct the Shakespearean history. The play, the fourth in the University theater's current season, is scheduled to open in March.

Readings for the other roles in the play are still being conducted and all candidates are urged to watch for calls on the speech department bulletin board, said Mrs. Seybolt.

UO Campus Radio Dates Back to '22

By JOANNE JOHNSTON
Emerald Reporter

Radio on the Oregon campus, now extending to the introduction of television facilities for instruction, dates back to 1922 when the Emerald Shack's Radio club set up a wireless telegraph plant and exchanged messages with Oregon State college.

The first University of Oregon broadcast over an established station was a rally for Homecoming by the Glee club and alumni given over KGG (now KPOJ) in Portland.

Lectures Broadcast

KGW was the first station to inaugurate a series of programs featuring University talent by introducing lectures by professors

Research Team Observes Kids

A research team under the direction of Richard A. Littman, associate professor of psychology, will observe nursery groups and play groups of Portland children under two years of age. The observations will be the first step in a research project on learning and development in children from birth to two years of age.

Money for the research was obtained from the University research fund. Two phases of study are planned for this year, the first of a five-year program.

Members of the research team include John Pierce-Jones, assistant professor of psychology; Theodore Stern, assistant professor of anthropology and Mary Calentine, Virginia Mathews, Jacqueline Mehta, Thomas Nugent and Miriam Rappaport, advanced students in psychology.

in connection with the extension division. The first broadcast from the campus was also over KGW when the inauguration address of Pres. Arnold Bennett Hall in 1926 was sent by remote control from the football field.

Portland continued to be the center of radio activity, even after the advent of Eugene's KGEH (KORE) in 1926, until 1929 when the Eugene station introduced a program called the "Emerald Hour," which featured student talent three times a week.

KOAC Used

The first move toward a campus station was taken in 1934, when plans for the installation of studios were submitted to the state board of higher education. No further action was taken for several years, but KOAC in Corvallis began using University talent. In 1939 radio facilities from that station were installed at the music school. In 1940 permanent studios were set up in the general extension building across from the journalism school. Included were two studios, a control room, an office and a teletype.

Operation through the KOAC facilities was not considered fully satisfactory because it limited student participation, especially in the engineering side. In 1946 the state board of higher education appropriated funds for studios in Villard hall.

KWAX Piped

In 1950 Kappa Rho Omicron, campus radio honorary, launched a drive to secure money for broadcasting over a carrier current system, collecting pledges from students for the returns from breakage fees. It was found, however, that the carrier current would be unsatisfactory, so the money was used to purchase an FM transmitter.

Remaining Emerald publication schedule for fall term is Dec. 1 through 4 (Tuesday through Friday following Thanksgiving vacation) and Dec. 10 (Thursday before final week.)

Theta Chi, SAE Report Weekend Burglaries

Robberies during the Homecoming weekend have been reported by two more living organizations, Theta Chi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and police report no further information concerning robberies reported earlier by Delta Upsilon and Delta Tau Delta.

Theta Chi reported to the Eugene police department that numerous articles of clothing, including seven sweaters and a topcoat were taken from the second floor of the house during the Oregon-Oregon State college game Saturday. No money was listed as missing.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon was robbed of $350 and several sweaters, overcoats and shirts sometime Saturday evening, Pres. Bob Brittain reported to the Emerald Monday.

Both the Deltas and the DU's reported Sunday of robberies over the weekend. The Deltas were missing five topcoats and a small sum of money.

Several hundred dollars worth of clothing was reported missing from the DU house, but no money was taken. The robbery occurred late Friday or early Saturday morning.

Button Sales Big Success

The financial success of Homecoming was assured Monday by returns on the button sales, Milan Foster, finance chairman, has announced. With the report from service clubs still not in, the total was 313 under last year's sales. Approximately 200 to 300 buttons are expected to have been sold to the service organizations.

A total of 1772 buttons was sold in the campus sales. Other totals were: 424, public schools; 187, alumni registration; 847, downtown, and 141, Springfield.

One of the largest crowds in the history of the Student Union ballroom attended the Homecoming dance Saturday evening. Over 1100 paid couples and 50 to 60 guests danced to the music of Dick Schwary and his band.

J-School Dinner Set for Tonight

The annual "civil war" battle between the University of Oregon and Oregon State college is a thing of the past for this year. But a minor civil war will occur tonight at 6 p. m. when journalism students and faculty meet on equal terms at the annual j-school family dinner in Student Union 215.

The evening will feature (according to what is listed on the ticket) "entertainment not worth the name, food that won't be cooked and service that is profane." Those attending are warned to wear old clothes and to "come and defend yourself—no one else will."

Gordon A. Sabine, dean of the school of journalism, will give an illustrated lecture on the new journalism building. Skits by faculty members and students will also be given.

Chairman Petitions Due for Dads' Day

Petition blanks may be picked up on the third floor of the Student Union and are to be handed in at the ASUO office, SU 304. The ASUO senate will select a general chairman for the weekend following interviews of candidates at its next meeting Dec. 3.
