What does an inventor look like?

In 1850, Samuel Kier built a one-barrel "teakettle" refinery in Pittsburgh. There, through his own genius, he first distilled petroleum and became America's pioneer oil refiner. But how times have changed.

Today, a new product is rarely one man's creation. The better products get, the harder it is to improve them. Now, many men of many skills must work together in research centers on projects planned long ahead.

For example: two years ago we saw the need for a new kind of motor oil that would fully meet the demands of precision-built, high-compression automobile engines. Among other things, this special oil must flow with full pressure at zero temperature-yet give full protection at 400 degree heat.

One man would never have the skills, time, devices or money to cope with such a complex problem. But at our Brea research center a team of Union Oil engineers solved it. And Union was the first to give the West this better lubricant.

Naturally we're proud to add new Royal Triton 5-20 motor oil to our many firsts. We think this new Union Oil product is one more proof that the best progress comes from an economic system that gives the best incentives. American free, competitive enterprise provides these incentives as no other system ever has.
