Good Idea--So What?

The honor code is a good idea.

An honor code for Oregon would be good.

These are accepted statements—it seems everyone at Oregon favors the honor code. At least, we haven't heard any violent objections. But, there haven't been many cheers to rush it immediately into effect, either.

The honor code is a stalemate. Its mention can invoke

A new committee faces the enormous task of reviving this dying issue and stirring up enough interest in it to get some action. But, they are beginning their work knowing the honor code may be dropped from senate projects this term. It's looking bleak for systemized honor at Oregon.

The apparent unconcern of Oregon students over the honor code has been termed good, bad and typical.

To some it proves individuality and is regarded as a promising sign. Others say it shows that the students don't really believe the system would work anyway. And many conclude it's just to be expected because most of the students don't care to know anything about it.

Out of these analyses the committee is still left with nothing to work on-no suggestions and no objections. But the need for fast action to create a definite student reaction is apparent.

It remains to be seen whether the honor code will take a long fest, which may be permanent, or whether some constructive progress may find the issue placed on a spring ballot.—(PG).

Innouncement

Mr. Frederick Heidel, formerly instructor in painting at the University of Oregon, and now teaching at Portland State, has requested the ROBERT PRESCOTT CO. to find, if possible, a university family to whom he may pass along the very beautifully designed contemporary house which he built at 2220 Hawkins Lane.

This is primarily a house for a scholar, a painter, or a musician. It is set back from the road among oaks and firs. Downstairs there are two bedrooms, living area with fireplace, kitchen, and bathroom. The entire upstairs consists of studio space with light from the north. It would, however, make a most desirable music room or library.

This property includes city water, nearly one and three quarters acres, and very likely as much privacy and natural beauty as can be found hereabouts.

The present tenants are friends of the Heidels and do not wish to be disturbed.

Price: $13,750.

Inquire ROBERT PRESCOTT CO., phone 4-9113 or 4-9002.
