Perry Lecturer Stresses Present Plight of Japan

Japan is due to the poor economic situation, said Ike. He pointed out that most of the Japanese prefer to remember 60 years of pre-war economic rise.

Ike gave the following facts to explain Japan's economic plight:

● Japan has 87,000,000 people today and the population is expanding at the rate of 800,000 a year. A population of 100,000,000 is estimated for 1965.

● The expanding population is adding 700,000 men and women to the labor force every year in a country where there aren't enough jobs.

Imports Needed

● Japan cannot feed its population and must import 3,500,000 tons of grain every year.

● To pay for imported food Japan must export. But the country has almost no raw materials. Thus Japan must also import raw materials in order to produce manufactured goods. This results in Japanese prices that are 20 per cent higher than American prices.

China and Southeast Asia are Japan's most promising markets according to Ike. However, he explains that Communist China lets politics govern its trade policy.

Ike gave several obstacles to Japanese trade in Southeast Asia: There is still much anti-Japanese feeling in this area, there are reparation problems, many of the countries are politically unstable and there is strong British competition.

Ike also explained the long term impact of Western civilization in terms of technical advancement, cultural enlightenment and political philosophy.

In his words "Western influence is like the propeller that enables a plane to take off from the deck of a ship."
