Harvey Deplores Category Labels

"If we really exercise Christianity, we will see people as individuals and not judge them by their labels," Martin Harvey, dean of students at Southern university in Baton Rouge, La., told his audience in a University assembly Tuesday afternoon in the Student Union ballroom.

Speaking on the topic "Christianity and Race Relations," the Negro educator said that the application of the tenets of the Christian faith will lead us to see a person as an individual rather than as member of a category.

Judgements are made on the basis of these category labels—traditions, background, geographic location and language—merely because "people are too lazy to judge the individual himself," Harvey said.

Reasons Given
Harvey, who is on campus as one of the Religious Evaluation week speakers, listed two reasons for spotlighting the race problem in the United States.

The first reason, he declared, is that America is built on the ideal that all men are equal. The second is that people of other nations are looking to us as world leaders for the solution of one of the world's great problems.

"This is one of the human problems which we need to see against the background of our Christian frame of reference," said Harvey. "Racial background is forgotten in the fellowship of Christianity," he added.

Ethics Explained
Harvey then devoted the major part of his address to an explanation of Christian ethics as applied to the problem of race relations. "Christianity," said Harvey, "insists that all men have a common origin, unique among creatures, that the human family belongs together and that the love of God and the love of man is the same."

In an aside to his topic, Harvey explained to his audience that it isn't true that everyone in the South is "evil" in regard to race relations.

If the Supreme Court rules to end segregation in schools (and Harvey expects them to do so, rule,) the people in the South will abide by the decision "because people are fundamentally law-abiding, fundamentally decent," he said.

Five ASUO Posts Open

Five positions in student government are now open to petition. Deadline for submitting petitions is 5 p. m. Thursday, according to ASUO Pres. Tom Wrightson.

Two senate vacancies occurred when Don Collin, ASUO vice-president, and Elsie Schiller, senior class vice president, resigned last week. Collin has withdrawn from school, and Miss Schiller will assume the editorship of the Emerald Tuesday.

Other positions open are rally board chairman and two places on the student traffic court. Al Goldenberg's term as rally board chairman ended fall term. The court vacancies occurred when Carl Weber resigned, and Dick Gray failed to return to school this term.

Sophomores in particular have been urged to petition for the traffic court vacancies, Don Rottenberg, chairman, has announced. Petitioners for the senate vacancies and the rally board chairmanship will be interviewed at the regular senate meeting Thursday evening, Wrightson said.
