Tolling of the Bells

It appears that Oregon is doomed to soon lose its title as a refuge for "extra-sensitive individuals." With the appearance of such a modern mechanism as automatic "no turn" lights—which still seem to require a great deal of vocal interpretation—and the possibility of chimes sounding out from the Student Union, a gay neurotic future can be foreseen.

It happened at the University of Colorado, according to the Associated Collegiate Press, where one student, irked by the ringing of carillon bells, sued the board of regents for $1,000 for "mental damages."

Despite the testimony of friends who said he had become ill-tempered since the bells began to ring and a university psychologist who said "prolonged stimulation could have such effects," the student lost his case before the campus moot court.

He charged, "The noxious bells . . . distract me while I work, disturb my work schedule, and have caused me great mental and emotional damage." One day, he said, upon hearing the bells he tore up a report which had taken him several hours to compile. A chiming rendition of "Hold That Tiger," he rated as hitting a new low on his disagreeable experiences list.

The jury termed him an "extra sensitive individual." At the University of California at Berkeley, the carillon obligingly played "Don't Fence Me In" for one alum as a request to his wife.

But mild disagreement over what is proper chime material seemed to be the only result. The "extra-sensitive individuals" had apparently made their escape long ago.

And, Oregon will see a change—something more dynamic than blinking lights. Gone will be the memories of a stilled campus and the "extra-sensitive individuals" who have tottered around for years will vanish. Oregon will lie seeped in tradition—a chorus of "P.S., I Love You," please.—(P.G.).

New Dance Group Schedules Try-outs

Try-outs for a new modern dance group will be held Thursday night at 6:30 in Gerlinger dance studio.

This first meeting will consist of try-outs for the group. Basic body movements will be tested and about 20 people will be chosen to dance in the group. The dancers will be under the direction of Marian Falloon, instructor in physical education.

Miss Falloon stressed the fact that all interested students may try-out. It is not necessary to be enrolled in a dance class to participate, she said.

The try-outs will be over by 7:30 in order that the students may attend the Budapest String quartet concert, Miss Falloon said.

Condon Lectures Appear in Booklet

"Evolution and Geography," a booklet containing the lectures given by George Gaylord Simpson as a part of the Condon lecture program here last year, has been published by the Oregon State System of Higher Education.

The lectures upon which the booklet is based were delivered in January, 1953, at the University of Oregon, Oregon State college and Portland State college by Simpson, who is curator of fossil mammals and birds at the American Museum of Natural History, and professor of vertebrate paleontology at Columbia university.

Two lectures, "History of Regional Faunas" and "Faunal Relationships Between the Old World and the New World," provided the material for the booklet.

Oregana Sales Deadline Jan. 31

Students who have not yet purchased an Oregana and still wish to do so must purchase the book before the end of January, according to the Oregana business office.

No more orders may be taken after January 31 because the total order will have been sent to the printers. Oreganas may be purchased until this date in SU 307.

No Beer Allowed

Constables were assigned to the University of Toronto's annual rugby train to make sure no one brought beer aboard. They were instructed to stop all students carrying suspicious parcels.

Last year the train suffered $500 damage at the hands of the rugby fans. The cost was paid through a general levy of students.

Senate Tax Action

To the editor:

The recent editorial by Al Karr regarding Senate action on the proposed income tax deductions gave the impression that the ASUO senate was quite confused over the whole issue and acted hastily in endorsing a proposal to contact Oregon Congressmen. Unfortunately, this is all very true. However, we think it appropriate to point out the reason for the action.

Senate procedure is such that senators are often asked to report on issues and these reports often form the sole basis for senate action, particularly on technical issues which the average person would have little knowledge of, as was the case in the tax matter.

In the course of gathering our information from experts for senate presentation a misunderstanding resulted over the 18 yr. age limit. We were unaware of this and it was passed on to the senate in our report. With this report as the basis, the senate made its decision and it was not until Mr. Karr's enlightening editorial that the issue was made clear. In the interests of maintaining the dignity and respect of the ASUO senate we feel that we should admit responsibility for this misrepresentation of facts.

English Professor Publishes Articles

Three articles by Hoyt Trowbridge, professor of English, have recently been published in periodicals.

Trowbridge's study of a poem by William Butler Yeats, titled "Leda and the Swan: A Longinian Analysis," appeared in the November issue of Modern Philology. The article was also reprinted in a pamphlet for private circulation.

The 1953 edition of Current Issues in Higher Education printed the contents of a speech Trowbridge made at the National Conference on Higher Education held last March in Chicago. The paper was entitled "The Faculty Member and His Work."

A book review written by Trowbridge on a new book, "Critics And Criticism—Ancient And Modern," appeared in the October issue of The University of Chicago Magazine.
