Future Teachers Practice In Eugene School Rooms

by Rodney Morrison Emerald Feature Writer

Approximately 80 University students are teachers this term. They are participating in the education school's practice teaching program.

The program, termed the "best professional experience available" by P. E. Kambly, professor of education, enables prospective teachers to "find out what it's all about" before they are faced with a class of their own.

The students, most of them seniors, have charge of classes in Eugene high school and four junior high schools. Their subjects range from art and history to physical education.

Experience Varies

Assignments are made during the term preceding that in which a student will teach and follow the student's interests and preparation. Once the student has his assignment from L. F. Millhollen, assistant professor of education and co-director with Kambly of the program, his practice is under the complete direction of his classroom supervisor.

Experience received by the student teachers varies greatly depending upon the interest and ability of the supervisor.

Projects Undertaken

Students may be put in complete charge of the class with the regular teacher present only occasionally. Sometimes they participate in extra-curricular activities, attend Parent-Teacher Association meetings and meet the parents of their pupils. Other students will teach their class, then leave school, having no further contact until the next class period.

Under the proper procedure with both student and supervisor co-operating, Kambly said, the practice teacher does more than appear five days a week for one hour. Lesson plans—detailed accounts of what will be taught that day and how it will be done—are prepared, lessons are read and often outlined, class projects to increase interest are worked out and conferences with the regular teacher are frequently held.

"Crushes" Are Problem

One student teacher, Shirley Soble, senior in art, agreed that the program "gives the student a chance to work in gradually, to get to know what the kids are like in a certain age group."

Another student who participated during fall term said the job of a student teacher "is really easier" if the children don't like their regular teacher. The student is someone new and is regarded by "most of the kids as a pal—after all, we're going to school too."

One of the biggest problems of the students is the tendency for teenagers to develop "crushes" on their teachers. A history major reported two of the girls in his class followed him around constantly and were teased unmercifully by their classmates.

Classes Observed

Miss Soble, who was once mistaken by the principal for one of her pupils, added that most of the women students have "their boys" charmed. It's an easy way to solve the discipline problem.

Before entering the program, students are encouraged to observe their class several times. Kambly said. They also take at least three education courses—secondary education in American life, educational psychology and principles of teaching.

6 Hours Required

The first week of the term the student teachers meet with officials of their school for a "get acquainted" program before actually beginning their classroom work.

Most students enjoy the program. Those who don't are encouraged to drop the class because chances are good they won't enjoy teaching after graduation, Kambly explained.

Oregon requires six hours of practice teaching for a certificate, California nine, he said.

For teachers like Miss Soble the program "is a lot of fun, you never know what will happen next."

Spanish Courses Planned Abroad

Two summer sessions for college students in Spanish speaking countries and conducted student tours in Europe are being organized by the modern language department of the University of San Francisco.

Courses in beginning, intermediate, and advanced Spanish, and in Spanish history and folklore will be conducted at Zacatecas, Mexico, and Segovia, Spain, and will run from June 28 to July 31.

Cost of tuition, room and board at Zacatecas has been set at $210, while various plans that include ship or air travel and sightseeing in addition to tuition, room and board at Segovia are available at approximately $1,165.

A student tour of Western Europe, conducted by a professor of romance languages at the university, will leave Quebec on July 1, returning there on Sept. 6. Transportation on the SS Atlantic, hotels, food, and motor-coach transportation throughout Europe is included in the tour price of $1,325.

Students interested in the tours may obtain information from the modern language department at the University of San Francisco.

Student Court Fines Three

The student court fined three men for violations of traffic regulations at its regular meeting Wednesday night.

Don Rotenberg, chairman, issued a $2 ticket to Don Bonime, sophomore in liberal arts, for failing to have a sticker and parking in the yellow zone of the Student Union lot. Bonime appealed the decision. Earle Culbertson, sophomore in art, was fined $2 for blocking the driveway of Phi Gamma Delta and E. D. Hastay, sophomore in business, paid a $1 parking fine.

A ticket issued to Irwin Caplan, sophomore in liberal arts, early in the week was voided as the car did not belong to him.

8:30 Radio Forum Has 'Crowd' Topic

Participating on a radio forum "The Lonely Crowd" over KOAC at 8:30 this evening will be Richard Littman, professor of psychology, and Lester G. Seligman, assistant professor of political science.

Bob Clark, assistant dean of Los Angeles college, will be the moderator for the program. Rev. Wesley Nicholson, pastor of the First Congregational church, will also appear on the forum.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Members of Orides, organization for Eugene women living off-campus, will meet at 6:45 this evening on the third floor of Gerlinger hall, Marian Cass, president, has announced.

Eldon L. Johnson, dean of the college of liberal arts and the graduate school, has been renamed president of the Eugene Planning commission. He has been a member of the commission since 1949 and has served as president for the past three years.
