Why gasoline is a real bargain today

Two facts lie behind the low price you pay for gasoline: oil companies work constantly through research to improve products and keep prices low, and they compete intensely for your patronage. That's why Standard opened the West's first petroleum research laboratory 32 years ago—and invests about $6 million annually in research today.

ONPA Features Idaho Newsmen

The 35th annual Oregon Press conference will be held here Friday and Saturday, under the co-sponsorship of the school of journalism and the Oregon Newspaper Publishers association.

Featured speaker for the confab will be William F. Johnston, managing editor and editor of the editorial page of the Lewiston, Idaho, Morning Tribune. He will give the annual Eric W. Allen Memorial address on "The Ingredient of Integrity" Friday afternoon.

Another feature of the conference will be a panel of five German newspapermen now studying at the University, who will interpret recent happenings in Germany.

Another panel will also be presented to the newspaper publishers attending the conference—a panel of housewives who will express their opinions on newspaper advertising.

Other speakers for the meeting include Miss Gladys Bowen, society editor of the Portland Oregonian; State Senator Stewart Hardie of the Condon Globe-Times and the Fossil Journal; Robert W. Chandler of the Bend Bulletin; Philip N. Bladine of the McMinnville News-Register, and Giles A. French of the Sherman County Journal in Moro.

One result you see here. Thanks to competition, gasoline prices (aside from taxes) have risen only 20% since 1925... less than half as much as practically anything else you buy. But there have been other benefits for you, too. Research, motivated by competition, has resulted in a steadily improving gasoline. Two gallons of modern gasoline do the work that required three in 1925, and this improvement has paved the way for lighter, much more efficient car engines that give you more power, performance and economy. Competition and research have led to better gas station service, as well, and to the world-wide search that has discovered the largest known oil reserves in America's history. Last year alone, Standard Oil Company of California invested $225 million in exploration, new oil wells, and improved facilities to keep pace with our competition. The net result to you is better gasoline at prices which make it one of the real bargains in your family budget.
