

WSC Eliminates Idaho; Oregon to Meet OSC

The Northern Division basketball race narrowed down to a two team battle for the championship Tuesday night when the unpredictable Washington State Cougars blasted the University of Idaho out of contention with a 56-44 victory at Pullman.

The Vandals, until this game, had retained an outside chance for a tie for the conference crown but their loss to the Cougars eliminated them from the running entirely.

Only Oregon State's pace-setting Beavers and the runner-up Oregon Ducks have a mathematical chance for the championship. When the two teams clash this weekend in their final series of the season, the issue will be decided.

In another series this Friday and Saturday nights the Idaho five will entertain the up and coming Washington Huskies in a two game set that could go a long way in deciding which team finishes in third place in the final standings. Tippy Dye's cagers, after a very poor start, have come back nicely in their past few games, and with a two game sweep of the Idaho series, the Huskies could pull their division record to an even .500 with seven wins and seven losses.

Washington and Idaho will probably go into the game as about "even-steven." The Vandals, playing on their home court, will be out to avenge two losses to the Huskies a few weeks back at Seattle.

Washington State, apparently doomed for the cellar this year, is idle this weekend and will conclude their schedule with two games against Washington at Seattle Friday and Saturday nights, March 5-6.

The Cougars were led to their big win over Idaho Tuesday evening by their high-scoring forward, Ron Bennink. Bennink played his usual stellar game and wound up the game with a fat total of 21 points. He was seconded by center Bill Rehder with 17. High point honors for the losers was center Dwight Morrison with 13 counters.

Phi Delta Theta, Hale Kane Lead IM Point Totals

Phi Delta Theta and Hale Kane continued to fight it out for the intramural point leadership with the completion of basketball and handball competition. The Phi Deltas have compiled 594 intramural points to 563 for Hale Kane. Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Alpha Tau Omega, and Campbell Club round out the top five — each gathering over 400 points.

The SAE's started the year off by winning the football title with Phi Delta Theta grabbing runner-up honors. Then, Hale Kane proceeded to dominate volleyball action by grabbing both A and B championships from the Phi Deltas. Basketball warfare saw two smooth working Phi Delt quintets roll over all opposition with Susan Campbell hall and Hale Kane taking second place in A and B, respectively. In handball play, a hard working Beta Theta Pi team won top honors by defeating ATO in the finals.

Theta Chi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Beta Theta Pi, and French hall complete the top nine with Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Nu, and Sigma Chi tying for the tenth position.

Holland, Halbrook Get Call On Emerald All-Star Five

With the basketball season rapidly drawing to a close the time comes for selecting all-star basketball teams all over the country. On the Pacific Coast there will probably be many varying opinions on who should be placed on the Northern Division all-star quintet.

Sports Editor Bob Robinson of the Oregon Daily Emerald has chosen the following players as the most outstanding stars of the Northern Division this year.

On the first team Dean Parsons and Karl Voegtlin of Washington get the nods for the forward spots. Wade Halbrook of Oregon State is the pivot man, and Barney Holland of Oregon and Ron Bennink of Washington State are the guards.

On the second five are Ed Halberg of Oregon and Bill Rehder of Washington State at the forwards, Dwight Morrison of Idaho at center, and Bob Garrison and Tom Flynn of Idaho at the guard posts.

Picking a team this year was difficult except for a few cases. Two or three players were definitely all-star material and it was no problem in deciding where to put them, but, for some of the positions the players were so close to being equal that it was quite a problem to determine just which one deserved the spot.

Following is a run-down on the first team and just why they are picked where they are.

DEAN PARSONS

Parsons, the Huskies' six-foot, seven-inch center from Eugene, Oregon, was one of the most outstanding cagers in the division and any all-star team without him included would be a mistake. Parsons has been a consistent scorer during the entire season and is the possessor of a 15 point plus average per game.

Parsons' favorite shot is a right-handed hook from the side of the key-hole but he also shows much skill with driving lay-ins and tips with either hand. Besides his pointmaking skill big Dean is probably the ruggedest backboard man in the league.

KARL VOEGTLIN

The Voegtlin will no doubt draw some raves of disapproval from many corners. Rangy Karl didn't show too much early in the season but in the Huskies' last six or seven games he has really become a shining light.

Contrary to popular opinion, it was not Parsons but Voegtlin who was responsible for the sudden surge of the Washington five late in the season. Voegtlin has been torrid as of late and as a result has brought his scoring average up to a very neat 11 per game.

Voegtlin stands six-foot, four-inches in height and has as his pet scoring weapon a deadly jump shot which he can use from just about any place on the floor. Karl is only a sophomore and because of his rapid improvement should provide the Washington teams of the next couple seasons with a great forward.

WADE HALBROOK

Halbrook, seven-foot, three-inch OSC center, is another must when it comes to Northern Division star teams. Halbrook has been the league's leading scorer all season long and at the present time is far out in front of his nearest competitors with an average of better than 20 points per tilt.

Another sophomore, Halbrook is expected to threaten Bob Houbregs' N. D. scoring record for a single season before he graduates.

Although the "Splendid Spire" specializes in tip-ins and close-in shooting he also can shoot a fairly accurate hook shot from time to time.

Halbrook has been the key to the Beaver offense all season long and he, probably more than anything else, has been the reason for the successful season that Slats Gill and his cagers have enjoyed.

BARNEY HOLLAND

Holland, the Oregon Ducks' five-foot, eleven-inch guard, would be the ideal playmaker for the mythical team. Holland is a senior from Coos Bay, Oregon, and is playing his third varsity season for the Ducks.

Barney has been the only Web-foot player who has played half-way consistent ball through the entire schedule. Holland is a cool-headed competitor who never shows much emotion when on the playing floor. He possesses a smooth one-handed push-shot from in front of the key and can shoot a jump shot with the best of them. Holland likes to drive in for rapid fire shots at the hoop and upon occasion this season has come up with amazing shooting averages. In a mid-season game with WSC Barney hit on 10 of 21 shots as he poured through 32 points against the shocked Cougars.

RON BENNINK

Bennink, the Washington State hustler, is one of the most underrated players in the conference. Played with a last place team, Bennink has proved that he is just about unstoppable from the scoring standpoint.

Shifty Ron, a six-foot, one-inch junior from Lynden, Washington, is second to Halbrook in Northern Division scoring and has a 17 point plus average per game.

Bennink can shoot with uncanny accuracy on the dead run and is also very sharp with a one-handed set shot from far out. He has scored over 20 points in many of the Cougar games this year and has caused all the Cougars' N. D. opponents much grief.
