Marlett Hits Homers; Forbes Hurls 7-Hitter

Catcher Neal Marlett smashed out two long home runs and Norm Forbes pitched a sharp seven-hitter Wednesday afternoon as the Oregon Ducks got back into the Northern Division win column with a 7-2 win over Idaho at Howe field.

By virtue of their win the Webfoots of Don Kirsch strengthened their hold on second place in the league standings behind Oregon State and Washington. Oregon now has a two won and one lost mark for their three conferenc games.

Golf Call
Golf coach Sid Milligan announced Wednesday that all freshmen interested in playing on the Oregon Duckling golf team this season should contact Dave Killern, club pro, at Laurelwood golf course as soon as possible.

Milligan said that practice would begin immediately and that all players would have approximately ten days to play their qualifying rounds.

Early Shower For Ed Stanky

Gerry Staley won a ball game and a suit of clothes while Manager Eddie Stanky of the St. Louis Cardinals was ejected following a protest by Manager Birdie Tebbetts of the Cincinnati Redlegs. The Cardinals took a 4-2 decision. But that was just a byplay.

Stanky had promised the suit to the first Cardinal pitcher to go the route this season. Staley won the award, holding the Reds to eight hits. But Stanky wasn't around to see the finish. He was tossed out of the ball game in the third inning. Tebbetts protested that Stanky was failing to remain in the third base coaching box. The Cincinnati manager said he was continuing the game under protest. Umpire Bill Jackowski ordered Stanky to remain in the coaching box. Stanky obliged but doffed his cap and danced like a chorus girl. At that point he was ejected.

From the sounds of things it appears that Stanky has inherited a few things from hot tempered Leo Durocher whom he played under for several years.

Speed Crazy Huskies Shoot for ND Marks

The sportswriters weren't kidding last weekend when they wrote that the Washington Huskies were "off to a running start" in the 16-game Northern Division baseball race.

In their two opening wins over Idaho, coach Bill Marx's team stole no less than 19 bases — that's right, 19! Their fleet-footed outfielder, Roland Halle, collected 7 of them, and on only one occasion was a Husky-runner thrown out attempting to steal.

These phenomenal totals prompted Paul Rossi, who covers the Huskies for the Seattle P-I, to label them as the "Run-Run" Huskies, a nickname which is likely to stick because Marx's nine loves to run and will do a lot more of it before the season is over.

Of course, they probably won't maintain that nine and one-half per-game clip, but Washington might well set an unofficial division mark. Unofficial because stolen base records, unfortunately, haven't been too well kept in the past. However, veteran writer George Varnell, who has followed Washington and ND baseball for many, many years, says he can't recall any crusade on the base-paths to match the current one.

The figures in recent years, where available, back Varnell's statement. In 1953, for example, Oregon's division champions stole 15 bases to lead the league in that department, and the individual leader, WSC's Stan Poppe, collect-

Marlett was the leading hitter for the Ducks as he found the pitching slants of Vandal Gary Barton very much to his liking. In the second inning and again in the sixth frame big Neal hit for four bases. Both of Marlett's blasts went over the left field embankment. The second one cleared the 370-foot mark still in the air.

Center-fielder George Shaw was another batting star for the Webfoots. Shaw, who has now hit safely in seven of 11 tries, picked up three singles in three trips to the plate for a perfect day. Shaw walked twice.

Forbes Fans Nine
In the pitching department Forbes had control of the Vandal bats most of the time. His control was near perfect as he walked only two batters. His tricky curves and lightning fast-ball accounted for nine strikeouts during the encounter. Only in the fifth and sixth innings did the visiting nine of Clem Parberry manage to pick up runs on the Duck right-hander. It was Forbes' second ND pitching victory against no defeats.

The Webfoots wasted little time in marking up their first run of the tussle. In the very first inning John Keller was safe on an Idaho error, went to third on Bob Wagner's double and scored on Ron Phillips grounder to second base. Oregon picked up their second score in the second inning on Marlett's aforementioned home run.

Idaho Rallies
Idaho almost got back into the ball game in the fifth as singles by Frank Teverbaugh and Bob Haines opened the inning and got Forbes into his first trouble of the game. A passed ball by Marlett allowed the runners to advance and then Jerry Quane's fly ball to center field brought in Teverbaugh with the Vandal's first score. Forbes got himself out of the spot by striking out Barton and forcing Bob Falash to fly out. With the score resting at a tight 2-1 count in Oregon's favor, the Ducks really opened up in their half of the fifth. Forbes started the fireworks with a single to right. Keller sacrificed him to second. Wagner then flew to right for the second out and the rally seemed to be stopped.

Shaw Hits
But Shaw lined a base-knock to left to score Forbes with the first run of the inning. Dick Schlosstein drew a base on balls and then on Phillips' easy fly to left Bud Nelson of the visitors dropped the ball allowing both Shaw and Schlosstein to cross the plate. Jim Johnson fanned to end the uprising. In all, three runs scored and the Ducks had a 5-1 lead.

The never-say-die Vandals fought back again in the sixth. Mike Cygler and Flip Kleffner sandwiched singles in between two fielding miscues by Johnson of the Ducks to tally one marker.

Marlett's second circuit smash equalized this Idaho run in the bottom of the sixth.

Keller Sacrifices
Oregon picked up their final run in the eighth when Marlett walked, went to third on a long single by Forbes and scored on John Keller's sacrifice fly.

Although the two teams committed five errors between them there were several nice fielding plays during the fray. One of the most spectacular came in the sixth inning when Forbes socked a long fly to right field which appeared to be headed for a sure double. But right-fielder Teverbaugh of the Vandals jumped high in the air at the last second, disappeared in the hedge which borders the playing field and came out with the ball in his glove for the fielding gem of the day.

There were three double plays during the game, two by Idaho and one by Oregon.

The two teams will play the second game of their series Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Bill Blodgett will probably start on the mound for the Ducks and Parberry's choice is unknown.

When challenger Ezzard Charles steps into the ring for his June heavyweight fight with champion Rocky Marciano, he will be shooting for an accomplishment that has never been attained before.

Charles will be trying to regain the title which he held some three years ago. No ex-champion has ever been able to get back the heavyweight toga after once losing it.
