UO Junior to Fly Over Eugene in Jet

Charles H. Greenley, junior in business, has been selected to ride in one of the F89 jet airplanes which will fly over Eugene this afternoon to officially open the Armed Forces day parade.

Between two and four F-89's from Portland Air Force base will fly over the campus at 3 p.m., when the parade will begin. Included in the parade will be the air force and army ROTC units at Oregon and living organization entries in the annual Junior Weekend float parade.

Greenley was selected to ride in one of the all-weather jet interceptors because of his standing in the AFROTC junior class, according to Maj. N. N. Mihailov, assistant professor of air science and tactics. Greenley is president of Scabbard and Blade, military honorary.

The F-89's, or "Scorpions," are part of the Portland AFB jet interceptor squadron, which is responsible for air defense of the Portland-Eugene area. The planes are two-seated, for the pilot and radar observer, and are equipped to track and shoot down an aircraft without having to see it.

Flying in the 600-mph range, the F-89 carries 50 2.75-inch folding fin rockets in each wing pod, one rocket being capable of knocking down an airplane with a direct hit. The Scorpions have a high rate of climb, required of an interceptor, and have an operating ceiling of 45,000 feet altitude.
