Summer Insurance Offered by ASUO

Summertime coverage under the ASUO insurance plan will be offered to University students this week, according to Doug Johnson, president of the Oregon Insurance Society. Applications will be accepted Wednesday in the main lobby of the Student Union.

Coverage on the plan extends to all accidents and protects policy holders wherever they may be during the summer months. Cost for the summer coverage is $1.50. The policy pays claims of any size from 50 cents to $500. Accidental death is covered for $500, and injury to teeth is covered up to $50.

Students who already have the coverage or those who purchase it Wednesday can present claims to any office of Mutual of Omaha.

Starlin to Leave For TV Center

Glenn Starlin, assistant professor of speech, has been granted a year's leave of absence by the State Board of Higher Education to join the staff of the Educational Television and Radio Center at Ann Arbor, Mich.

The third member of the University administration to join the Ford Foundation program, Starlin will take over his new temporary position June 1. Harry K. Newburn, former University president, resigned the presidency in September to head the Educational Television and Radio Center. Lyle Nelson, former director of public services for the University, resigned to become Newburn's assistant at Ann Arbor.

Starlin, who also has been administrative assistant to the University president, will work in the areas of program planning, development and procurement for educational television.

He has been at the University since 1947. Before then he was a director of personnel administration programs for the Army Security Agency of the War department.

Mark Patterson Wins Ford Foundation Grant

Mark Patterson, senior in history, has been awarded a $2500 Ford Foundation fellowship for advanced study in Slavic history.

Patterson will enroll in Harvard university's Russian institute this fall. He recently was elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honorary.
