Dedications Plans Made As Allen Hall Nears Completion

Construction of Eric W. Allen hall is ahead of schedule, and the new journalism center will be ready for occupancy by mid-summer, Gordon A. Sabine, dean of the school of journalism, announced this week.

Fall term classes definitely will start in the new building, Sabine said. Much of the equipment for the $600,000 structure already has been delivered, and no major delays have developed either in construction or ordering.

The building will be the first post-war construction finished on the campus ahead of schedule.

Seminar Room Planned

A feature will be the Eric W. Allen memorial seminar room. For this, alumni and friends of the school were invited to contribute funds for the purchase of unusual furniture, to provide a partial duplication of the living room of Dean Allen's home.

The amount requested was $2000. The amount already paid in cash to the memorial fund is more than $3000, and the project has been over-subscribed more than 50 per cent.

Formal opening ceremonies for Allen hall will be held Saturday, Oct. 9, when journalism alumni and former students will hold their first reunion since the school opened in 1916. Activities that day will include tours of the building, and a Student Union luncheon for state and University officials, State Board of Higher Education members, present journalism students, and newspaper and broadcasting personnel of the entire state.

There will be no single dedication ceremony for Allen hall. Instead there will be a year-long program of some 20 different events, all based on the general theme of "The Responsibility of Journalism and Journalists." Among them will be addresses by some of the nation's leading mass communications experts, including:

- Walter Lippmann, newspaper columnist and foreign affairs analyst.

- Dore Schary, vice-president in charge of production, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

- H. K. Newburn, former University president, now head of the Educational Television and Radio Center.

- Thomas d'Arcy Brophy, New York City, chairman of the board of directors, Kenyon & Eckhardt, one of the country's largest advertising agencies.

- Don Belding, Los Angeles, partner in Foote, Cone & Belding, and a former university journalism student.

- J. R. Eyermann, Los Angeles, Life magazine photographer, and former chief of photographers for Life.

- Palmer Hoyt, former publisher of the Oregonian, now editor and publisher of the Denver Post, and a 1923 graduate of the University journalism school.

Arthur Hays Sulzberger, publisher of the New York Times, is tentatively scheduled as a speaker. Other events which are planned include:

- A press photographers clinic, jointly sponsored by the Oregon Press Photographers association, the Oregon Newspaper Publishers association, and the school of journalism.

- The annual high school press conference.

- The annual state meeting of the newly-formed Oregon Collegiate Press association.

- The annual state meeting of the ONPA newsmen's department, headed by A. F. Baker, Jr., managing editor of the Eugene Register-Guard.

- The semi-annual meeting of the ONPA ad men's department, headed by Eugene Anderson, advertising manager of the Lakeview Examiner-Tribune and a 1925 Oregon journalism graduate.

- A broadcasting conference for all radio and television broadcasters of the northwest.

Ducks, Chieftans On Deck at 12:30

Four crack collegiate baseball clubs open the first District 8 NCAA baseball tournament at Howe field Friday with Oregon meeting Seattle in the first game and the Southern California Trojans tangling with Fresno State in the second half of the opening day double-header.

The Trojans, champions of the Southern Division of the PCC and the CIBA, have been installed as slight favorites on the basis of a well-balanced pitching staff led by Marty Zaunich, Vic Lappiner and Ralph Pausig.

All of the clubs worked out at Howe field Thursday.

Game time for the Seattle-Oregon tussle has been set at 12:30 p.m. with the second game to follow a half hour after the Chieftans and Ducks are through. Fair weather is predicted for the tournament. Additional seating, bringing the capacity to 5,000, and a new fence have been installed at Howe field.

Forbes to Pitch

Norm Forbes, batting champion of the Northern Division as well as the top pitcher in number of games won, will probably face John Kelley on the mound when the Ducks meet the Chieftans. Forbes will enter the game with a record of seven wins and two losses while Kelley is unbeaten in seven starts.

Zuanich, with a 7-2 record for the year, is the possible choice for USC and Ted Willis, who broke even in eight games for the Bulldogs, will be his opponent. Both Seattle and Fresno State suffered pitching losses through NCAA ineligibility with Ernie Pasternicky, missing from the Seattle roster and Bob Doig, Bud Mechem and George Millhorn out of the series for Fresno.

All Teams Are NCAA Vets

Oregon earned its way into the playoffs for the second year by winning the Northern Division pennant on the final day from Oregon State. The other three teams qualified earlier with Seattle and Fresno the at-large selections and USC the PCC's other representative. All are veterans of the NCAA's baseball tournament and the Trojans have one national championship to their credit.

The tournament will continue with three games Saturday, with two teams being eliminated. The championship will be decided on Monday.

Senate OK's Combined Athletic, Student Card

Combination student body-athletic cards were a step nearer to becoming a reality Thursday night when the ASUO senate gave its approval to a proposal to combine the two cards into one all-purpose ticket.

Sam Vahey, chairman of the senate athletic card committee, reported that both Bill Bowerman of the Athletic department and University Business Manager J. O. Lindstrom had given tentative approval to the combination card.

Vahey told the senate that several minor differences must be eliminated before definite action can be taken, but that the disputed points are relatively minor ones.

The proposed change grew out of demands for a better means of identification following card checks at intervals during the basketball season.

Committees Appointed

The senate also approved ASUO President Bob Summers' appointment to eight standing committees. Committees and members are: Insurance—Jim Duncan, chairman; Constitutional committee—Don Crawford and Alex Byler; Constitutional revision committee—Jim Light, chairman, and Mal Scott; Rally board committee—Stan Savage, chairman, and Germaine LaMarche and Bob Maier; Honor code—Gordon Rice, chairman.

The appointment of Bud Hinkson as Northwest Federation of Collegiate Leaders chairman was approved, and the following members of the ASUO cabinet named: Pete Williams, athletic chairman; Jerry Beall, public relations chairman; and Kay Patch, social chairman.

Bob Maier was unanimously elected to serve as representative to the Oregon Federation of Collegiate Leaders.

Keys Discussed

Tom Wrightson, 1953-54 ASUO president, told the senate that he has discussed the possibility of purchasing keys for past members of the senate with jewelry firms and that the cost would be approximately $70.

Millrace Chairman Jim Light briefly outlined the history of the millrace problem for the senate.

The selection of Janet Farris as editor of the Ore-Nter was approved.
