Lederman Paces Ground Gainers

Washington's Sandy Lederman, the third ranking passer in the nation last year, is off to an early lead in both passing and total offense, according to figures released this week by the Pacific Coast conference commissioner's office.

Lederman completed 17 of 33 passes for 217 yards against Utah Saturday, one more pass than Paul Larson of California completed. George Shaw of Oregon ranked fourth among Coast passers, completing eight passes last week. Shaw is also fourth in total offense, with 152 yards from running and passing to his credit.

High Poll Ratings Given Webfoots

Oregon's Ducks enjoyed high standings in two rating polls released this week. The first Associated Press poll of the season listed the Webfoots as the 16th team in the nation.

Paul B. Williamson, another rating authority, has given the Green and Yellow squad a 10th position among nation football powers. Oklahoma was named the number one team by the AP, while Williamson had Texas as the top squad in the country.

Sam Brown of UCLA leads in rushing yardage after piling up 108 yards on only eight carries against San Diego Navy. Bill Tarr of Stanford is second with 84 yards.

Three receivers, Jim Roake of Washington, Jim Hanifan of California, and Jim Carmichael of California, have each caught six passes. James of Oregon and Jim Houston of Washington are close behind with five catches.

Coast Conference Teams All in Action This Weekend

All nine Pacific Coast conference teams will go into action this weekend, with two conference games and five intersectionals scheduled Friday and Saturday.

In addition to the Oregon-Stanford game at Multnomah stadium in Portland Saturday night, Idaho will go to Corvallis to meet the Oregon State Beavers Saturday afternoon. The Idaho game will be the season opener for the Beavers, the only conference team which did not play last week.

Two other conference teams will step outside the conference to meet Western independents. California, which lost to Oklahoma in its opener last week, meets San Jose State at Berkeley Saturday afternoon.

San Jose beat Utah State last week, but it may have been a disastrous victory. Joe Ulm, who scored 11 touchdowns in four games last year before being ruled ineligible on a technicality, was injured and may be out for the season.

Washington State, which absorbed a sound beating by USC last week, will meet College of Pacific at Stockton Saturday night. COP also lost its opener, to Stanford.

In major intersectional clashes, the Washington Huskies, narrow winners over Utah last week, will play Michigan in Seattle Saturday afternoon. The game will be the first of the season for Michigan.

UCLA, which pulverized San Diego Navy last week, is expected to get tougher competition this week from the University of Kansas at Lawrence, Kans., Saturday afternoon. Kansas lost to Texas Christian in the opener for both teams last week.

In the other game this week, USC, which thumped Washington State last week, will meet Pittsburgh Friday night in the Los Angeles Coliseum. Pitt will be playing the opening game of a nine-game schedule which includes games with teams from nearly every section of the country.
