

Duck Tracks

A look at the opening day football turnouts at the various Pacific Coast conference schools illustrates just how tough it will be for Oregon to field a team that will have the depth to compete on even terms with most of the other schools in the conference this year.

Oregon's first team, backed up by a few outstanding reserves, is probably as good as any on the Coast, but the Ducks lack the numerical depth boasted by the larger schools in the conference. Discounting Idaho, Oregon had the smallest turnout in the conference for the opening day of practice.

Only 45 Duck hopefuls turned out, in contrast to a whopping 92 prospective grid-ders at the University of California. The University of Southern California coaching staff greeted 80 players, UCLA had 72 and Stanford 69. The turnouts at the other Northwest schools were somewhat smaller than those at the California schools, but still larger than at Oregon.

The University of Washington had the largest opening day squad in the Northwest, with 63 grid-ders showing up. Washington State had 57 and Oregon State greeted 56 men.

Idaho never had more than 39 men in uniform at one time during its fall practice sessions and could be in for its most disastrous football season in a long history of disastrous seasons.

'Big Green' Works Out For Game With Stanford

By Chuck Mitchelmore
Emerald Sports Writer

Oregon's "sleeper" Webfoots went through "fairly light" drills Thursday in preparation to be wide awake for Stanford under the lights of Portland's Multnomah stadium Saturday at 8 p.m.

Attempting their second conference win in as many tries, Coach Len Casanova's "team-to-watch" Ducks will have a noticeable vacancy in the fullback department with Jasper McGee and Larry Rose crippled with injuries received in last weekend's 41-0 rout of Idaho.

Fullbacks Shallow

Senior Fullback Dean Van Leuven, third man in the Oregon pile-driver section, will start against the Palo Alto Indians, although Rose will probably be available for action later in the game, according to Trainer Bob Officer.

The chances of McGee's performing were dim at mid-week workout time, but Casanova said that the sophomore standout might play. Rose is recuperating from a hurt shoulder and McGee had a rib cartilage separation.

Favorable football weather reports have led experts to predict a passing battle. The fine appearance of Webfoot aerialists last Saturday lends the statistical edge to Oregon. Three of the four Duck quarterbacks — George Shaw, John Keller and Don Holt — passed for touchdowns and the fourth, Wally Russell, completed two out of three.

Stanford compiled only 83 yards through the air as compared with Oregon's 291, but the Indians had their hands full with College of the Pacific and had to depend on their ground game in edging out a 13-12 victory.

The Cardinal and White defense was outstanding, however, and Coach Chuck Taylor's grid-ders were tops among PCC clubs in first week pass and total defense statistics. The Indians allowed the Tigers only 31 yards on passing and held their opening opponents to 108 net yards for a first place defensive loss of 139.

Graduation Losses Hurt

All-American quarterback Bob Garrett's graduation and the loss of front line ends Sam Morley and John Steinberg via the same route hurt the Stanford pass attack, but Taylor is depending on sophomore quarterback John Brodie and Jerry Gustafson, a junior veteran from Astoria, to hurl against the Webfoots' imposing passers. Junior End John Stewart is named as one of the Cardinals' top receivers.

Casanova's charges spent the week sharpening offensive and defensive maneuvers after viewing movies of the Idaho game. Cameramen were busy Thursday filming publicity shots of Duck workouts for pre-game information when the Webfoots go on a national television hookup with Southern California Oct. 16.

IM Office Asks For Referees

A call for referees for intramural touch football games has been issued by the intramural office.

Referees will be paid 85 cents an hour, and may expect to work about two and a half hours a day, from 3:45 to 6:15 p.m. Anyone interested in the work may contact Paul R. Washke, director of the intramural program, or Tom Yano, assistant director of the program, at the intramural office in the physical education building.

Touch football competition will begin Oct. 4, with a preliminary meeting of house athletic managers scheduled for Sept. 30 at 4 p.m.
