McCarthy Censure

The American people owe a vote of thanks to the six senators, members of a special senate committee investigating charges of misconduct made against Senator Joseph McCarthy, for their recommendation—made public Monday—that the junior senator from Wisconsin be censured.

The big wind out of the Midwest has bullied and misled us long enough. His wild and unfounded allegations against fellow citizens, his self-styled "crusade" against Communism, his unseemly conduct as a representative of a great state have only served to throw the entire senate into disrespect and hopelessly confuse and divide the American people.

The committee composed of three Republicans and three Democrats, can be commended for the fair-minded, thoughtful way in which they handled the investigations. Chairman Arthur V. Watkins, the Utah Republican, early in the hearings made it clear that there would be no place in his committee's meetings for the diversionary tactics so often employed by McCarthy.

Television, which served to make such a spectacle out of the earlier Army-McCarthy hearings, was not allowed to interfere with committee proceedings. This, we feel, was not so much a denial of rights to the press, as it was a recognition of the seriousness of the matter under discussion.

There was much fear that the members of the committee could be intimidated by the power which the junior senator from Wisconsin has already built around his name. The report of the committee, unfavorable certainly to the political future of McCarthy, demonstrated that this fear was unjustified.

The American people can only hope now that the entire U.S. Senate, to be called into special session Nov. 8 to vote on the committee's report, will approach the issue with the same open-minded impartiality of the six-man committee which has just finished its hearings. We have a right to expect non-partisanship in a question so vital to the future direction of American politics.

It's a Tradition

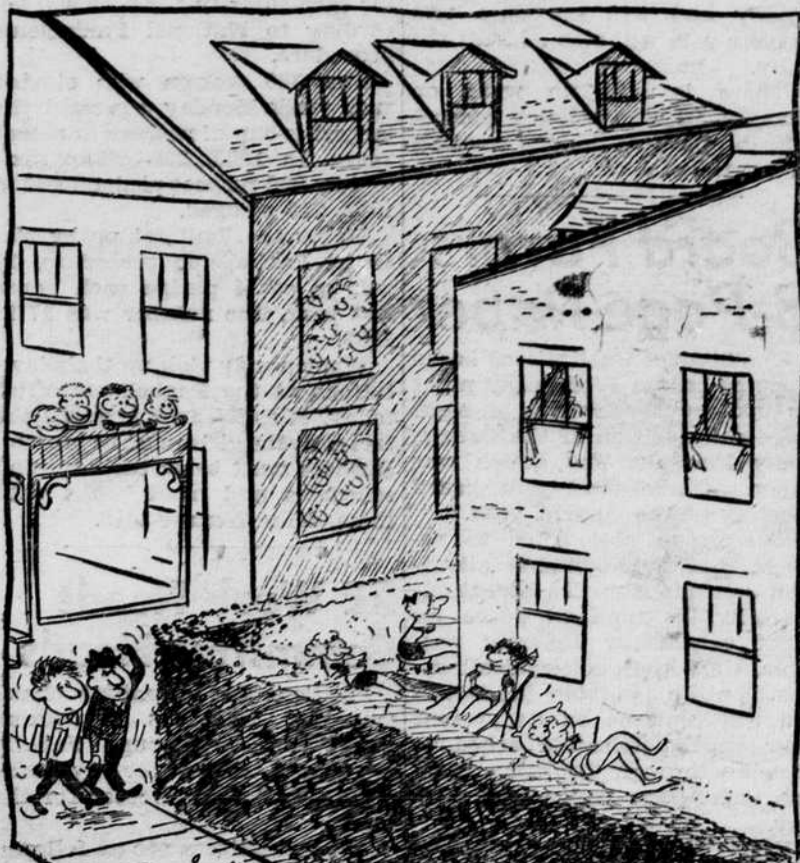

A campus tradition has been neglected, and numerous freshmen are in momentary danger of drowning. They haven't been warned of the impending disaster that faces us all.

That tradition, that danger is the physical plant's monster sprinklers. Freshmen have never been warned of the hazard, and we've watched them bravely set forth in their new white bucks and curled hair only to be turned back by the twirling sprinklers.

The Emerald annually runs an editorial complaining about the sprinklers. This does no good, but it's a tradition. This is not an editorial of complaint (that will come next spring). This is just a warning.

Never trust a sprinkler, freshmen. They do weird things. Now, please excuse us—we have to go put on some dry clothes.—(J.W.)

"I don't know what kinda line the 'Sigma Phi Nothings' give the rushees, but year after year they seem to snatch away the best boys."

Emerald Short On Bibler Mats

Bibler cartoons, a six-year old feature of the Oregon Daily Emerald, will only appear in every other edition of the campus daily this year. Bibler Feature service of Elkhart, Kans., can supply only 80 cartoon mats this school year, so there will not be enough cartoons to run daily as in previous years.

Campus Briefs

The Student Union needs someone to run its embossograph machine a few hours each week. Anyone interested can obtain further information or an interview by calling Sonia Edwards, 5-9523.

All Episcopal students are cordially invited to attend the Holy Communion service, which will be followed by breakfast, at 7 a.m. Wednesday, in Gerlinger hall.

Student infirmary patients who received medical attention Tuesday include Loeloa Lorenzen, Denise A. Parr, Joanne Donnelly and Rob W. Roy.
