It's not very often that the nation's number one passer is in danger of losing his starting assignment while still leading the nation, but that's exactly the situation at the University of Washington.

JOHNNY CHERBERG
Too Many Quarterbacks

Quarterback Sandy Lederman, who has completed 33 passes for 390 yards in two games so far this year, is currently engaged in a red-hot battle with Sophomore Bob Cox for the starting spot. Cox, who was a sensation as a freshman last year, alternated with Lederman last weekend against Michigan and directed the only sustained drive that the Huskies put on all afternoon.

Cox hasn't run up the impressive completion and yardage totals that Lederman has, but he hasn't yet had the opportunity or the experience that Lederman received last year on the varsity. Lederman will probably start against Oregon State Saturday in Portland, but the Washington coaches plan to alternate the two throughout the game, just as they did against Michigan.

Coach Johnny Cherberg feels that the two quarterbacks call for a different type of ball game, and that the change in style from one signal-caller to another tends to make the job tougher for the opponent's defense. No matter who Cherberg decides to start, it's a decision any other coach in the conference would love to have to make.

PCC Clubs Set For Weekend Of Kings-Xers

Only one Pacific Coast conference football game is scheduled this weekend as the other seven teams in the league all meet intersectional opponents.

Oregon State, which beat Idaho in the Beavers' opener last Saturday, meets Washington in the lone conference contest. Washington gained a number of supporters last week by holding Michigan to a tough 14-0 victory.

Intersectionals Listed

In intersectional games, Oregon meets Utah at Eugene in a battle of two teams who were the victims of upsets last week. Utah was massacred 54-20 by an underdog Arizona team after leading 20-13 at halftime. Illinois lost a 14-12 upset to Penn State while Stanford was upsetting Oregon 18-13.

The other coast teams also meet Big Ten opponents this weekend. USC, conqueror of Pittsburgh, meets Northwestern at Evanston. Northwestern opened last week with a win over Iowa State. California moves into the Midwest to meet Ohio State at Columbus. Cal massacred San Jose State last week while Ohio State was taking a Big Ten contest from Indiana.

UCLA Plays Maryland

In one of the bigger games in the nation this week, UCLA meets Maryland Friday night in Los Angeles. Both teams are undefeated with UCLA beating Kansas and Maryland being idle last week.

Washington State, 18-0 victor over College of Pacific last week, finds the opposition a lot tougher this weekend when it plays Texas at Austin. Texas will be trying to bounce back from last week's loss to Notre Dame.

In the other game on the coast, Idaho plays San Jose State at Moscow as both teams nurse their bruises from last week.

Helms Taps Bill Hayward

Colonel Bill Hayward, who coached track at Oregon for 44 years, has been named to the Helms Foundation track-and-field Hall of Fame. The Helms committee made the announcement from Los Angeles Wednesday.

Hayward, who died in 1947 and was known as the dean of American track-and-field coaches, started his coaching career at California and coached at Pacific and Albany college. He came to Oregon as track coach and trainer in 1904 but eventually coached all major sports.

Star Maker

A member of six Olympic coaching staffs, Hayward developed a number of track stars at Oregon. Among others were Paul Starr and Carson Shoemaker, sprinters; Ralph Hill, mile; Mack Robinson, broad jump and hurdles; and Bobby Parke and Boyd Brown, javelin.

Others elected to the Helms Hall of Fame were Harold Davis, former sprint champ; Harrison Dillard, Olympic hurdle and sprint champion; Louis Gregory, distance runner; Robert A. Fetzner, former North Carolina director of athletics; and Earle C. Hayes, athlete and coach at Indiana university.

Athletic Managers Meet at 4 Today

A meeting of house athletic managers will be held today at 4 p.m. in the physical education building.

The managers will hold a discussion of touch football rules, and will decide whether or not to include wrestling in the fall intramural program.

Paul R. Washke, intramural director, has also announced that the intramural football schedule probably can be distributed at that time.
