

Enrollment for UO Tops 4400 Mark

Oregon's enrollment figures went over the 4400 mark last week as the number of University students increased 10 percent over last fall term's mark of 4013.

At last count, the exact figure stood at 4406 students enrolled in school through the end of last week. This included 2799 men and 1607 women in that total.

Biggest jump in number was felt in the freshman class which topped last year's figure of 1076 by 26 percent. This included 759 men and 593 women, by far the biggest class in the University.

The sophomore class is second with 1072 which is a six percent increase over last fall's total. Other class figures released by the registrar were juniors, 589, up two percent; seniors, 533, down five percent; graduates, 619, up 19 percent and larger than either the junior or senior classes; and special students, 241, down nine percent.

The school of health and physical education recorded an astronomical gain of 53 percent over last year's figure for majors with 174 as against 114 majoring in P.E. this term. Another high gain came in the school of journalism with a 36 percent increase over last year. Journalism majors now number 53, 32 men and 21 women, compared with 39 professional majors last fall.

Other school major enrollments include the college of liberal arts, 3316, an increase of 10 percent; school of architecture and allied arts, 182, up one percent; school of business administration, 322, up one percent; school of education, 187, up five percent; school of law, 82, up five percent; school of music, 56, the only school showing a decrease in majors, down three percent; and general studies, 34, up 17 percent.

Figures for veterans this fall show that 488 Veteran Administration G.I.'s have enrolled this fall at Oregon. This includes 83 World War II vets, 76 regular and seven disabled, and 405 Korean war vets, including 397 regular and eight disabled.

Fable of Post War Policy Disected by W. A. Williams

The American story of the cold war is a fable agreed upon and written by men who were responsible for U.S. policy toward Russia from 1945 to the present, said William A. Williams, assistant professor of history.

Williams' topic, "Notes on the Natural History of the Cold War," was presented in the browsing room Wednesday night. H. E. Dean, assistant professor of political science, was the discussion leader.

American policy makers viewed United States entrance into World War II as a defensive measure when the military situation was very grave, Williams stated. This defensive policy determined America's wartime policy.

When the military situation eased, American policy makers turned to a positive program. "They assumed the desirability and the possibility of restoring and maintaining the central features of the prewar economic and social status quo," Williams said.

Allied economic, political, and social policy were almost negative. Such documents as the Atlantic Charter were never stated in a comprehensive manner. This limitation was due to constant military problems. "American policy makers were concerned with stabilizing instead of changing the post-war world."

At the Atlantic Conference, early in the war, the U. S. talked about an Anglo-American world. Russia's strength was doubted and her radical views were feared. The U. S. did not want to accept any changes in Russia's pre-war boundaries; yet the U. S. emphasized the need for crushing Germany and Japan.

Not knowing whether the atomic bomb would work, American policy makers faced a dilemma. Russian help was necessary to whip Germany, and it seemed then, Japan. This would mean that Russia's borders would extend beyond the pre-war boundary.

Williams commented that Stalin was more interested in the reconstruction and redevelopment of Russia than the spreading of Communism. Yalta was ironic in that the Soviet Union was apparently willing to abandon its efforts to force the world revolution.

The immediate cause of the cold war was the breakdown of a tentative agreement between Russia, Britain and the U. S.

After Roosevelt's death, his critics fell into two groups (1) a "sit on the lid" attitude toward Russia and (2) an active expansion group.

The conflict between these two groups led to the policy of containment. Containment failed because it rested on the assumption that Russia couldn't produce the H-Bomb. When she did, it split the balance of power between Russia and the U. S.

When containment failed, the U. S. was left without a foreign policy because both conflicting groups did not consider negotiation as a possible solution.

Carson, Uni House Schedule Pictures

Pictures of Carson 2 and University house for the 1955 Oregon are scheduled to be taken today at Kennell-Ellis, Oregon photographers.

White blouses and dark blue blazers will still be the appropriate attire for the women, with blazers provided by Kennell-Ellis.

Pictures of the women's living organizations will be taken from 9 a.m. throughout the day. Oregon representatives will continue to visit the houses at the evening meal the day before pictures are to be taken. They will remind the women of their appointments and answer any questions concerning the method of picture taking and the attire to be worn.

Pictures of Orides are scheduled for tomorrow.

Chairmen Want Homecoming Ideas

A contest for a suitable theme for this year's homecoming weekend opens today.

Theme suggestions may be placed in boxes in the Student Union or the Co-op. Suggestions should pertain to all activities of the special weekend, according to Betti Fackler and Dick Beckman, homecoming co-chairmen.

Winner of the theme contest will receive two tickets to the homecoming dance, Nov. 13 plus a merchandise gift. Theme selection contest co-chairmen are Barbara Bailey and Shirley Brown.

"Alums and We, '76 to '53" was selected as last year's theme. The 1952 Homecoming followed the theme, "Sing the Story, Oregon."

Plans Concerts

The Eugene-Springfield community orchestra will give a series of five concerts in the Eugene high school auditorium on Oct. 25, Nov. 22, Jan. 24, Feb. 21 and April 4.

Quartet Performs In SU Ballroom

Tickets for the Griller String Quartet concert, Monday at 8 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom, are now available at the SU main desk. Tickets are free, but students must have a ticket to be admitted as only 1000 seats are available.

The concert is the first event of the two-day University Charter Day celebration, which continues Tuesday. The quartet is from the University of California and is the oldest and best known string group in the world, according to William C. Jones, dean of administration, who has arranged for the concert.

The group is composed of Sidney Griller and Jack O'Brien, violinists; Philip Burton, viola player, and Collin Hampton who plays the violin-cello. Selections from Mozart, Beethoven, and Oregon composer Ernest Block will be included on the program.

Students to Meet SC Horse Tonight

Captain El Trojan, guardian of Southern California's mascot, will be the special guest at a rally tonight at 6:30 in McArthur court.

Captain El Trojan, special guest of the rally squad for the event, is charged with the protection of USC's mascot — a wooden Trojan horse.

Pairings for the rally are: Alpha Chi Omega, Phi Gamma Delta; Alpha Delta Pi, Delta Tau Delta; Alpha Gamma Delta, Philadelphia; Alpha Omicron Pi, Sigma Phi Epsilon; Alpha Phi, Delta Upsilon and Kappa Sigma; Alpha Xi Delta, Lambda Chi Alpha; Ann Judson, Barrister Inn and Gamma hall; Rebec house, Merrick hall; Sigma Kappa, Phi Kappa Psi; University House, Hale Kane; and Zeta Tau Alpha, Phi Kappa Sigma.

Republican Party Meeting Tonight

Oregon republican students will start their election campaign with a party 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Student Union.

On the agenda is the appointment of a chairman and committee to handle the Candidates Fair, scheduled for Oct. 22; Governor's reception, Oct. 18; and a giant rally on election eve, Nov. 1.

Bob Bachelder, state chairman of the College League of Young Republicans, will be at the meeting to discuss matters pertaining to the coming convention, to be held here Nov. 3-4.

Monday Features Wilson Induction

The first Charter day the University has ever held will be celebrated in conjunction with the inauguration of O. Meredith Wilson.

Commemorating the founding of the University, Charter day has been planned around the theme, "The University's Responsibility in the Tradition of Freedom." The two-day celebration begins Monday and concludes with an alumni dinner Tuesday night. Outstanding events of the celebration will include addresses by three distinguished speakers, the Griller string quartet concert, and academic procession for the induction of President Wilson, and a reception for President and Mrs. Wilson.

First event of Charter day will be the Griller String Quartet concert, Monday at 8 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom. Admission is by ticket only. Tickets are available at the SU main desk at no cost.

300 Invitations Accepted

Registration of alumni and visitors to the University for the event begins Monday at 4 p.m. on the second floor of the SU. More than 300 invitations have been accepted by officials of institutions of higher learning, learned societies, state civic leaders, and friends of the University, who are expected to register Monday. Registration continues into Tuesday beginning at 9 a.m.

Tuesday at 10 a.m. in McArthur court Julian Huxley, world-known biologist and educator, will address the charter day audience on "The Bearing of Scientific Knowledge on Belief in a Free Society." All 10 o'clock classes will be dismissed so students may attend the address.

Campus Procession Planned

The President's inauguration begins at 2 p.m. Tuesday with an academic procession from the old campus to McArthur court, where the inauguration will be held. Clarence H. Faust, head of the Ford Foundation Fund for the Advancement of Education, will deliver the inauguration address on "Universities and the Life of Reason." All 2 and 3 o'clock classes will be dismissed so students may attend the inauguration ceremonies.

A reception for President and Mrs. Wilson will be given Tuesday in Gerlinger lounge at 4 p.m. by the Faculty Women's club. Students are also invited to attend the reception.

The Alumni Association Charter day dinner is Tuesday at 6 p.m. in the SU ballroom. Speaker for the dinner will be Zecharia Chafee, professor of law from Harvard University. The address, "If the Salt has Lost Its Savor," will be open to the public. Admission to the dinner is by reservation for alumni only.
