

Campus Merry-Go-Round

At Delta Zeta

Tina Fisk, president of Delta Zeta sorority, announced her engagement to Frank Taggart of Sacramento, Cal., currently with the U.S. Army. Nancy Hill is engaged to Drew Jones of Bend, USN. Claire Frye and Rick Hayden, Delta Upsilon, were recently pinned. Marriages make up the greatest part of Delta Zeta news, however, with five weddings taking place since school closed last spring. Carolyn Haskins was married to Vern Adkinson, and Arliss Harder was married in early September to John Frey of Portland. Marie Flecher and E. Judge Elderkin, Theta Chi, were married in June and are living in Oklahoma. Erma Houston was married Oct. 3 to Jim Henrickson of Glenwood, Washington.

At Alpha Chi Omega

Pinnings at Alpha Chi include Judy Kirk to Larry Quackenbush, ATO; Kay Hyatt to Nik Smith, Phi Psi; Cynthia Long to Milan Foster, DU; and Barbara McNabb to Bob Stout, Beta. Doris Stenshoel has announced her engagement to Al Mundle, Phi Delta. Married recently were Charlene Hanset and Doug Clayton, SAE; Rosemary Hampton and Gary Meredith, Chi Psi; and Nancy Leonard and Reed Hansen.

At Alpha Delta Pi

This past summer and fall were romantic for five A.D. Pi's with weddings, engagements, and a pinning taking place. Portland was the scene of the wedding of Addie Woodruff and George Booth, Pi Kappa Alpha. During the summer Kay Maxwell was married to Jerry Sabotta who is attending Gonzaga University at Spokane, Washington. There were two summer engagements. Viola Gramson became engaged to Jim Sells, and Merla Thomas announced her engagement to Bob Dean, Campbell Club. The final event in the romantic whirl was the pinning of Carol Arneson to Bob Kelly of Campbell Club.

At Kappa Kappa Gamma

Summer marriages at Kappa Kappa Gamma include Dimpy Spaulding to Robert Morris, Chi Psi; Valerie Cowles to Mel Govig, Phi Psi; and Mary Cosart to Neal Marlett. Joan Sheldahl recently Co-eds Study, Loaf in Style!

Bermuda shorts have finally moved out west, but on the University of Oregon campus they are still being somewhat suppressed—with only a few daring to wear them inside the sorority houses or in the dorms. However, by the end of the school year this style, which has been the rage in the eastern colleges for several years, should be firmly established at Oregon and will undoubtedly move to the outside with the call of spring term picnics.

But for the present Bermuda shorts are strictly for lounging as far as the UO co-ed is concerned. Lounging clothes make up a big part of a college girl's wardrobe, since studying is rarely done in a skirt and sweater unless one is at the library.

There are still a few who belong to the Levi and sweatshirt school, but the majority of college girls prefer more fashionable lounging clothes, such as torreador pants and matched pajama sets.

Indian moccasins seem to be the favorite footwear around the dorms. They are easy to slip into and are very comfortable, as well as being noiseless. Such colors as corn yellow or turquoise, accented with bright beads, show the influence of the American Indian on fashion.

Hawaii has also made its bid in the world of lounging fashions with the loose fitting mu-mu. The mu-mu is much like a sack dress. It is made of a brightly colored Hawaiian print and cleverly lined in a matching color.

Pajamas aren't strictly for bedtime anymore. They are being styled so they can double for such things as pedal pushers shorts, blouses, and even dancing costumes. Several lingerie companies are putting out pajamas that are fashioned after a dancer's leotard. The knit fabric of the pajama is supposed to give freedom as well as warmth to the wearer. No matter how many new lounging and bedtime styles appear, every college co-ed will agree that nothing can take the place of a long flannel nightgown and a hot water bottle on a cold sleeping porch.
