

Hope Is Seen For Millrace

By Anne Ritchey

Emerald Assistant Managing Editor

"What is desirable for Eugene's Millrace," was the topic of a special committee meeting of the Eugene City council Oct. 5.

The Millrace committee, composed of council members and interested Eugene citizens, recommended that the outlet gate at Broadway and Franklin Blvd. be enlarged to raise the water level of the 'Race.

Jim Light, chairman of the ASUO senate's Millrace committee, said that the project would not only insure a constant flow in the stream, but would also serve as an extra safeguard against floods.

Little More Than Lake

"At its present flow," Light said, "the Millrace is little more than a lake." Raising the level would give students a chance to "see what the 'Race' would be like as a type of lake."

Final approval of the project must come from a future meeting of the committee, for which no definite time has been set as yet.

Other subcommittees of the council currently doing research on the problem include: study of possible connection of the Millrace and Amazon slough; possibilities of abandoning the 'Race,' alternative sources of water, and the present situation of the historic stream.

When all of these groups have met and made recommendations, the council will determine the fate of the Millrace.

May Be Some Hope

"There may be some hope, despite the dark picture presented last year," Light said. Light added that all aspects of the problem will be considered before any action is taken.

The current investigation was started when Mayor V. E. Johnson appointed the subcommittees last year. Light expressed the opinion that townspeople as well as University students are anxious to have something done about the Millrace.

As a recreational and scenic area for the city, the Millrace could provide parks, fishing, swimming, and canoeing facilities.

Public Access Impossible

Public access to the stream is impossible now, Light said. Access can come only through raising the water level and construction of a permanent dam. Maybe the days of canoe fetes and other University activities centered around the Millrace are a thing of the future as well as of the past.

Nothing definite has been accomplished, but the framework for action has been constructed.

ONE CAR PER HOUSE

Portland Pre-Game Rally Pending on Council OK

University of Oregon students will hold a pre-game car rally through downtown Portland before the USC-Oregon football game, if the rally board gets the Portland city council's approval of the plan.

The parade would be made up of one car from every living organization on campus. The rally board is asking that each group also make signs for the sides of the car. The sign would contain a brief phrase, picture, or slogan, and would be signed by the living organization. When the rally is over, these signs will be taken off the cars, and taken to the game where they will be displayed in the bleachers.

The rally will get underway at 11 a.m. from Holloday park, located near Lloyd's golf course on N.E. 13th and Multnomah streets. The parade will go south on 13th until it joins with N.E. 12th avenue, and from there it will continue to Burnside, where the procession will cross the Burnside bridge.

Moves up Broadway

The parade will turn off Burnside at S.W. Broadway, and will go up Broadway to S.W. Main. It will travel west and turn right on S.W. Park avenue, then continuing to Morrison. Finally it will go west on Morrison to Multnomah stadium where it will disband in time for all participants to park their cars and get seats at the ball game.

Although a living organization may have only one car at the front of the procession, as many students as wish may follow behind in their own cars. The "tail enders" may have signs on their cars, too, if they wish. There will be a police escort for the entire parade, if the Portland city council approves the rally board's plans.

Traditions Rigidly Enforced

Traditions will be rigidly enforced for the USC game, according to Sally Stadelman, rally board chairman. The names of all freshmen violators will be taken at the game, and a "Kangaroo Court" will be held at next Thursday's rally. The rally board is asking Doug Clement, president of Order of the O, lettermen's club, to be judge at the court, and there will probably be many lettermen serving as jurymen.

All freshmen men must wear their "dinks" to the game, and the lids must be turned so that the green side is out, signifying Oregon won its last football game. Freshmen women will have to wear their green ribbons to the game.

If the weather is nice, Oregon's men will form a white shirt section in the bleachers.
