Outstanding members of the army ROTC program will receive awards at 1:40 p.m. today on the drill field. Col. Robley D. Evens, professor of military science and tactics, will make the presentations.

Littman Defends Social Sciences

The social sciences are coming closer together in that they look for universal aspects of man's life in both the group and the individual, R. A. Littman, associate professor of psychology, told the browsing room audience last night.

Littman believes that categories of social science will not be merged because they work in different fields.

Littman spoke on "Where the Social Sciences Are Going." R. J. Richman, instructor in philosophy, was the discussion leader.

"Social science has been very effective in the world today. During the war, it predicted that Negro and white soldiers could be integrated.

"It has predicted the effects of the recent supreme court's decision on segregation even to the troubled spots in the south.

"Eight months before the atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, social scientists knew that the Japanese were ready to surrender. However, this prediction was disregarded by officials in Washington."

Social science uses "time-tested methods," Littman declared. Experiment is one of several methods available and is used wherever possible. "However," Littman joked, "it would not be ethical for social scientists to start a war in order to have a laboratory."

Ten cadets of the advanced infantry ROTC program will be presented with awards emblematic of distinguished military service. They are Robert Arndt, Jack Boettcher, Bradford Blaine, Ward Cook, Franklin Haar, Emerson Harvey, Robert Glasson, Richard L. Lewis, James Moore and Richard Yates.

Transportation corps men to receive the distinguished military student award are Howard Keefe, James Light, Gary McAdams, Jack Patera and Lloyd Powell.

Colonel Evens will also present the military science I and II awards.

Receiving freshmen honors will be Carl Groth, Terry Fujinaga, Charles Huggins, Phillip McHugh and Jerome Pool.

Sophomores from last year getting awards will be Richard Lee, David Goode and Lee Tucker.

A special membership ribbon to Scabbard and Blade, military honorary society, will be presented to two new members elected into the organization. George Grosz and Powell will be given the ribbons.

Senior Quits Traffic Court

Don Rotenberg, a member of the student traffic court for the past three years, has resigned, ASUO President Bob Summers announced Wednesday.

Rotenberg, a senior in chemistry, has served on the court since his sophomore year in school and last year was chairman of the organization.

Summers said that Rotenberg's resignation was not the result of any misunderstanding between he and the ASUO Senate. Rotenberg was recently selected as senior class president and he felt that the combination of this position and his court post would entail too much of his time.

The senate will officially accept the resignation at its next meeting. At the same time his replacement will be announced.

Middleton's Band To Play Saturday

"The band plays in a style much the same as Ray Anthony's," said the leader of the 16-piece group.

At spots during the dance the band will be broken down into a small Dixieland group to add more variety to the program.

Katy Taylor, well-known singer who has sung with other groups at several local nightclubs, is the featured vocalist of the band.

Musicians to hold solo spots in the evening entertainment include Myer, trumpet; Glenn Benner, trombone, and Dick Dorr, saxophone.

Middleton, a 24-year old pre-law senior, appeared in several scenes of the recent movie, "The Glenn Miller Story." While in the service, he played in a small combo known as "The Airmen of Note."

The band consists of four trumpets, four trombones, five saxophones and a three man rhythm section.
