

Wesley Building To be Dedicated

The official dedication of the new Wesley Foundation will begin Saturday with a banquet at 6 p.m. in the new building. Dedication services, open to the public, will follow at 8 p.m.

The new structure, located at 1236 Kincaid street, provides spacious meeting rooms, a chapel and recreation facilities for the Methodist student religious organizations. It is one of several Methodist student centers on the campuses of state colleges and universities. The group sponsors educational, social and recreational activities, as well as worship, for students under the guidance of the Rev. Kenneth Peterson, Wesley Foundation director.

The dedication is being held in conjunction with the fifth annual meeting of the members of the Corporation of Wesley Foundation at the University of Oregon. Charles G. Howard, professor of law and chairman of the corporation, will preside at the Saturday banquet and dedication service.

The dedicatory address will be presented by Bishop A. Raymond Grant, head of the Oregon, Pacific Northwest and Alaska conferences of the Methodist church. The banquet program will include a talk by Bishop James C. Baker, retired founder of the Wesley Foundation movement, music by the Wesley Foundation choir and a solo by Audrey Mistretta, senior in music.

Many Wesley alumni will be present for a reunion with three former Wesley Foundation directors who plan to attend the dedication.

The former directors are Dorothy Nyland, secretary of student work, women's division of Christian service of the Methodist church, New York City; Mrs. Mary Beth Hurlocker of Florence, and Mrs. Mary Findly Lockenour of Salem.

Open Shelves, Audio-Visual Aids Serve UO in Functional Library

By Ardon Milkes
Emerald Feature Writer

In October, 1937 on the Oregon campus, a brick building was dedicated with these inscriptions above the front entrances: "Ye Shall Know the Truth" and "And It Shall Make You Free." It was the new University library.

Third largest library in the state in 1937, the University library now possesses one of the largest collections for a college library in the United States.

1950 Sees Annex Built

The year 1950 was one of the most important dates in the University library's history since its beginning in 1882. A new addition was built onto the old structure and an open shelf system was established. Before 1950, the book stocks were closed to students. Now they are open so that students may browse and make their own selections.

"I would say the open shelf system has been quite successful here, and there has been a growing move in that direction among libraries," Carl Hintz, University librarian, remarked.

Recordings Available to Students

In addition to books, pamphlets and reference materials, the library maintains an audio-visual department on the basement floor. Students may listen to records from a large collection of classical music, language records and famous speeches. Special music booths are provided primarily for use by music and language majors.

"Our basic service is helping persons find what they need," said Hintz.

A special service added recently is a section of shelves for all new books. The section, located in the card catalogue room, is for the benefit of students who wish to see what new volumes the library has acquired. The books remain on these shelves for ten days before being distributed to their respective sections.

Salem Attorney to Talk

Steve Anderson, Salem attorney, will be the guest speaker at the coming meeting of Changing club, which will be held at the Unitarian church, 11th and Ferry, at 7 p.m., Sunday.

Advertising Topic Of Writing Session

Advertising problems and procedures, especially as they apply to a campus daily, will be discussed in this week's Saturday Special sponsored by the journalism school and the Oregon Daily Emerald.

Held each Saturday in Allen 306 at 10 a.m., the sessions are open to any interested students.

Jean Sandine, Emerald business manager, and members of her staff will talk about advertising as it specifically applies to the Emerald.
