Nan Hagedorn, sophomore in English, and Fritz Fraunfelder, sophomore in pre-dentistry, were named Betty Coed and Joe College, respectively, by the students attending Saturday night's Sophomore Whiskerino in the Student Union ballroom. A record Whiskerino crowd of 1000 attended the dance.

Miss Hagedorn was sponsored by Pi Beta Phi and Susan Campbell and Fraunfelder by Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Winners of the beard-growing contest among all sophomore men were Chuck Wingard, first; Richard Lee, second, and Richard Childs, third. Charlie Elliot of Elliot's Barber Shop and Donald DuShane, director of student affairs, measured the beards. Elliot gave a free shave on stage to first-place winner Wingard.

Darrel Brittsan, sophomore class president, acted as master of ceremonies for the intermission. Rob Roy, freshman in liberal arts, entertained with piano selections.

Doug Basham, Skull and Dagger president, announced the four new members elected to the sophomore men's honorary. Phil Hill, pre-law; Wingard; Joyle Dahl, liberal arts, and Phil Richter, business administration, were tapped.

The Phi Eta Sigma award for the sophomore man with the highest accumulative grade point average during his freshman year was presented to Ronald Spicer, sophomore in music, by Dick Van Allen, president of the scholastic honorary. Spicer's accumulative GPA is 3.82.

Music for the dance was provided by Roger Middleton's 16-piece band, making its first public appearance.

Topic for Morse Talk Unknown

Senator Wayne L. Morse will speak to a University assembly this Thursday at 1 p.m. The subject of his speech is still unknown.

It is expected, however, that Oregon's junior senator will speak on some key issues of the current senatorial race. Morse is currently engaged in "stumping" for the Democratic nominee for U. S. Senator, Richard Neuberger.

The University assembly committee, in line with election year policy, will request that Morse speak on issues rather than personalities of the campaign.

All classes scheduled for 1 p.m. Thursday will be held on Tuesday at 1 p.m. to enable all students to attend the lecture.

Morse, former dean of the law school, was elected to the senate in 1944. Re-elected in 1950, he achieved national fame by bolting the Republican party two years later. He holds the Senate record for the longest speech, talking more than 53 hours on tidelands oil.

Election Set for Nov. 10 For Fresh, Graduates

By Jackie Wardell
Emerald Associate Editor

Freshmen and graduate students interested in student government and/or campus politics have until Nov. 3 to petition for a spot on the freshman and graduate ballot Nov. 10.

In that election one graduate student representative and the four freshmen class officers will be chosen. Freshmen may petition for either president or representative with the second highest presidential candidates becoming vice president. The two top representative candidates will be elected to that post.

Any student with less than 35 hours credit is classified as a freshman. Regular ASUO petitions may be picked up at any time on the third floor of the Student Union and should be returned to the ASUO petition box.

A new system will be used in this year's election operation. ASUO vice president Hollis Ransom describes it as both a way to educate voters and a way to add efficiency to the voting process.

Four booth captains will be selected by the senate election committee and these captains will have two attendants at each booth every hour. In the past a booth was manned by only one attendant.

Although it is not definite how much, if any, action the campus political parties will take in the election, each party may have a poll watcher present at the booths at all times. These poll watchers must be registered with the ASUO president 48 hours before the election.

Booths will be located in the Student Union, in front of Commonwealth hall, by Friendly hall and in the quad in front of the library.

No booths will be located in Straub or Carson hall this year as in the past. Ransom explained this gives unfair advantage to freshmen living in these dormitories. He also pointed out that having booths in the freshmen dormitories puts them out of easy reach of the graduate students who will also be voting.

University Signs Teaching Compact

A contract between the University and the United States foreign operations administration for the training of 1750 school teachers in Nepal was signed June 1 of this year and announcement of the agreement was made last weekend by the University president's office.

According to the agreement, the University will be represented by a project director in Nepal to assist the Nepalese ministry of education in setting up short-term teacher training courses.

Hugh B. Wood, professor of education, has been selected as the representative and was present for the signing of the June 1 agreement in Katmandu.

The agreement calls for the training of 150 new teachers and 100 experienced teachers during the first year and double that number each year until 1750 have been trained. The budget allotted by the FOA covers a three year period starting with $65,000 the first year of operation, with the total to amount to $220,000.

The University will also help to establish a four-year degree granting teachers college in the Himalayan nation.

Wood expects to return in 1955, the end of the first year of operation, bringing with him seven Nepalese teachers to be selected by him and the Nepalese ministry of education.

The seven teachers will study here at the University under Wood's supervision for 18 months. They then shall return to Nepal as the nucleus of the Tri Chandra Teachers college, to be established in Katmandu. This will be the first college of its kind in Nepal where seven out of every one hundred cannot read nor write.

Nepal, a landlocked country about the size of Iowa, is situated on the north side of India and south of Tibet in the Himalaya mountains. Formerly under British domination, Nepal gained her independence in 1923, but has continued to aid Britain in time of war.

Emerald Editor Short Shorted

If you see a young man walking around campus today in a barrel, it may be the Emerald editor.

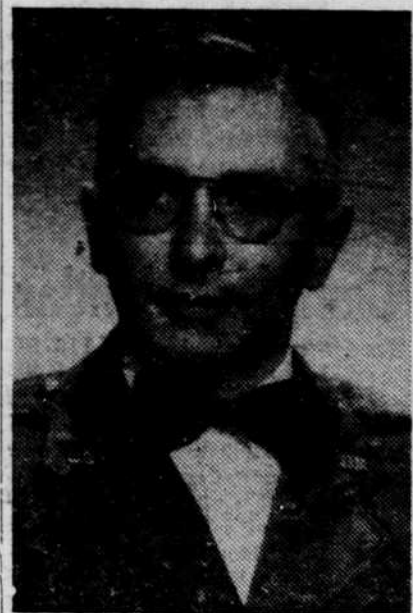

While away for the weekend, there was a small fire in Joe Gardner's room at the Phi Kappa Psi house and all of his clothes were smoked up—even his shorts. One consolation is that he has the charcoal slacks, white bucks and blue sweater he was wearing on his trip.

Too bad, Joe, it's rather nippy out isn't it?
