

'Guide' Ready In November

The 1954-55 Pigger's Guide will be completed in the middle of November, according to Anne Ritchey, editor, and Boyd Harris, business and distribution manager.

They will be on sale at the Student Union main desk and the Co-op, and price will be 50 cents per book.

The books include complete student and faculty directories, and phone numbers of all University offices. Student Union and ASUO personnel are listed, and campus honoraries and publications are included.

Sigma Chi's Select 13 Semi-Finalists

Thirteen semi-finalists have been selected, ending the first stage of Sigma Chi's annual Sweetheart contest. The original 27 contestants, representing every campus women's living organization, were entertained by the fraternity at desserts Tuesday and Thursday evening.

Those chosen are Gloria Ben- genich, Alpha Chi Omega; Har- riet Swanson, Susan Campbell; Jo Eggleston, Carson 3; Mary Leash, Delta Gamma and Hend- ricks; Carol Hennings, Sigma Kappa and Susan Campbell; Pat Gordon, Kappa Alpha Theta; Mary Lou Glass, Carson 4; Nan Borquist, Alpha Phi; Nadine Woodroffe, Kappa Kappa Gam- ma; Patti Philips, Carson 5; Carolyn Courtemanche, Pi Beta Phi; Eleanor Whitsett, Gamma Phi Beta, and Evelyn Nelson, Hendricks.

These 13 freshmen will be en- tertained at the Sigma Chi house again Tuesday and Thursday eve- nings, after which 5 finalists will be chosen. The selection of Oregon's Sweetheart of Sigma Chi for 1954 will be announced during a 15 minute program on station KORE Thursday, Nov. 4. The winner will be honored at the Sweetheart dance Nov. 6.

Elmer Davis Cancels Talk

Elmer Davis, well known au- thor and news analyst, has postponed the talk he was scheduled to make here Nov. 18.

Davis, who was to be one of a series of speakers participating in the year-long dedication pro- gram of the new journalism building, postponed his talk be- cause of ill health.

Gordon A. Sabine, dean of the School of Journalism, said that an effort will be made to have Davis appear here later in the year.

Radio Forum Plans Second Discussion

"Can We Afford the Rising Cost of Public Schools?" will be the topic for the University of Oregon Radio forum on KOAC at 8:30 this evening.

Paul Jacobson, dean of the school of education, will be moder- ator, with Clarence Hines, su- perintendent of English in public schools; John Guy Fowlkes, dean of education at the University of Wisconsin, and Donald E. Tope, professor of education and director of the Kellogg founda- tion for this district, as panel members.

Part Readings Planned For 'Hannele' Tryouts

Final tryouts for men's and women's parts in "Hannele" will be held today and Tuesday in Villard 102. All students are in- vited to tryout.

Part readings are scheduled for 4 p.m. The final casting will be held Tuesday at 7:30 in the same room.

"Hannele," written by Ger- hart Hauptmann, will be directed by Horace W. Hobinson. The pro- duction will open Dec. 3.

Petroleum Pushers Pare Pump Prices

Motorists on campus will find driving a bit more economical due to slashed prices on gasoline in the Eugene area.

Weekend developments in the two-week-old gas war brought prices for regular gasoline down to 22.9 cents per gallon and ethyl to 25.8 cents per gallon, lowest record for petrol prices in 15 years.

Gasoline prices had ranged up to 31.9 and 34.7 cents before the opening of two gasoline stations which placed signs up announc- ing lower-than-competition prices. Since that time nearly all the local stations have lowered prices to meet the competition.

Harold Glaisyer, operator of a service station on E. Broadway, said that he had filled at least ten 50-gallon barrels since the price cut and "all of the five gallon cans in the country. I never knew there were so many five gallon cans."

There is no indication as to when the "war" will be over or how low the prices will go, but Ted Hearn, president of the local gasoline dealers association, said Saturday that "it looks as though the new price is spreading over the area."

A similar "gas war" took place here last fall, but prices became frozen when they reached the 29.8 low for regular gas.
