Ike Says Cadets May Enter Debate

President Eisenhower differed with the superintendents at West Point and Annapolis in his weekly press conference Tuesday when he said that he would be inclined to trust the judgment of the cadets in debates.

The Associated Press reported that the president said he would let the cadets publicly debate—to their heart's content—the question of whether the United States should recognize Red China.

The superintendents ruled out debate of that question which had been posed as one for college debaters to tackle this year.

Both the Military academy and the Naval academy had suggested that farm price supports be discussed as an alternate topic.

Cancels Debate
Spokesmen for the Naval academy, which two weeks ago cancelled an engagement to debate the topic with Princeton, said that they "will not debate an established public policy," and added that the academy could not permit cadets to take the side of the communists on the controversial topic.

Herman Cohen, district chairman of the National debate tournament and assistant professor of speech, said that the academies are attempting to impose "militaristic thought control upon American universities."

"Such thought control has not previously been attempted in this country but it was common in Germany while a dictatorship controlled the country."

The Intercollegiate Forensics Association of Oregon, last Oct. 30, passed a resolution favoring the use of the selected topic even if the Military academy is unable to entertain the national tournament this year as a result.

The West Point National Invitational Debate Tournament has been called "the Rose Bowl" of debating teams.

Junior Assistant Applications Due

Nov. 30 is the deadline for submitting applications for the civil service assistant's junior management examination which must be taken in order to qualify for the Navy program in this field.

For the last six years the navy department has recruited a number of outstanding college men and women to train for eventual assignment to top-level administrative positions. The department is now planning its 1955 management intern training program. Successful completion of the civil service commission's junior management assistant examination is necessary in order to qualify for the management program.

Fall Papers Stop After Next Week

This week marks the last week of regular publication for the Oregon Daily Emerald during fall term. The Emerald will be published every day this week.

Only one paper will be published next week, that on Thursday.

Regular publication for winter term will resume Tuesday, Jan. 4, the day after school opens for the term. A total of 45 Emeralds will be published during Winter term.

Chairman Needed For Dad's Day

Petitions for the chairmanship of the Dad's Day weekend, to be held in February, must be turned in to ASUO President Bob Summers' office by 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The chairman will be selected at the senate meeting Thursday night. Summers emphasizes that any student with a 2 point GPA is eligible.

Korean Veterans Double Enrollment

Four women and 83 men, all veterans of World War II, are now enrolled in the University and Korean veterans total 405 men and 6 women.

This number is almost double that of Korean veterans here last year. And this year, for the first time, Korean veterans have overtaken and absorbed the decrease in World War II vets, according to Clifford Constance, registrar.

Long-range estimates predict a 25 percent increase during the next two years, Constance said.

Federal Agencies Need Librarians

There is still a need for librarians in various federal agencies in Washington, D.C., according to the United States civil service commission.

Applicants are required to take a written test and must have completed a full four-year college course which included at least 30 semester hours of study in library science.

People with four years of library experience or one full year of professional library training and three years experience in library training may also apply.

Positions vary in pay from $3410 to $7040 a year. Positions paying over $4205 require experience in professional library work.

Further information and application forms may be obtained at post offices or from the Civil Service commission, Washington 25, D.C. Applications will be accepted until further notice.

8 P.M. MEETINGS

Winter Term Signup Begins

Pre-registration for winter term will begin today.

Lower division students will meet with their advisers at 8 p.m. in the rooms assigned in the time schedule. Upper division and graduate students will go to their adviser's office.

Time schedules, containing reproductions of the official registration card, can be obtained from the Registrar's office.

Meetings with advisers can be scheduled to the end of the term.

Students with their adviser's signature on their trial study program will be permitted to proceed to the other stages of registration on Jan. 3. Students who wish to change their program after the conferences will have to consult their advisers on Jan. 3.

Students who cannot schedule classes until they learn the results of their fall term grades should make appointments with their advisers on Jan. 3.

Students should have a tentative schedule for winter term drawn up before they go to the meetings so that advisers can sign them. If students need additional help in making out their schedules, they may have additional conferences with their advisers in the two weeks before the end of the term.

EOCE Republicans Threaten Pull Out

LA GRANDE-(AP)—The Young Republican club at Eastern Oregon college, reputedly the third largest in the state, threatened Tuesday to pull out of the state federation because it was slighted on an invitation to the state meeting.

Arthur Hartgraves, club chairman, said the executive board of the club which recently announced that it was seeking more members in a drive for a total of 200, had been forced "into an agonizing appraisal" of whether to stay active in the federation.

The trouble, he said, was because the local club had not been invited to attend the state meeting at Medford.

This has brought "intense disapproval," Hartgraves said, among the local members and officers. However the senior members of the Republican party will continue to get support, he added.

Hatfield to Speak At GOP Meeting

College league of the Oregon Young Republicans will hold their annual state convention on campus Dec. 4.

More than 100 delegates, representing nine Oregon schools, will attend the convention, at which Governor Paul Patterson will speak.

Registration for the convention will begin at 11 a.m., with opening sessions starting at 1 p.m.

Afternoon speaker will be Mark Hatfield, newly-elected state senator, from Salem. Election of officers for the coming year will also be held, prior to the banquet at which Patterson will speak.

Liquor Association Protests Use of ID

Oregon Licensed Beverage association protested use of present methods of age certificates in controlling sale of liquor to minors.

The method requires the signature of the prospective customer, plus at least two items of identification.

The protest came following the announced intention of the state liquor control commission to crack down on sale of liquor to minors.

Naval Commander On Campus Today To Interview Men

Lieutenant Commander W. J. Hampton, naval aviation procurement officer from the Seattle Naval Air station, will be here today and tomorrow to interview men interested in aviation and other naval reserve commissions.

Hampton will be in the Student Union between 9:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. both days.

He will advise applicants who take the written and physical examinations for Navy flight training, which will be given Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Naval Reserve training center on West 13th.

The written tests will be given on a no-obligation basis, and any man who has two years of college or who will complete his second year at the end of the current academic year is eligible to take them.

The mental tests, which require from three to four hours, are designed to test mechanical aptitude, aviation comprehension, spatial apprehension and biographical inventory.

Successful applicants may enter naval flight training any time before their 25th birthday, Hampton said. Persons who fail to make a passing grade may take the tests again after one year.

Navy flight training consists of a 15-week pre-flight course, eight months of basic flight training and approximately five months of advanced training. Graduating cadets are given their choice of accepting a commission with the navy or marine corps reserve.

The examinations were previously given in Seattle, Hampton said, but are now being given in other areas so that students will not have to interrupt their studies to take the tests.

Drama, PE Authorities Lecture Here Tuesday

Two top visiting speakers will appear on campus Tuesday.

Margaret Webster, noted authority on Shakespearean drama, will speak to a University assembly Tuesday at 1 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

Jay B. Nash, dean of the college of recreation, physical education, health and athletics at Brigham Young university, will speak in the SU at 8 p.m. on the topic "Can America be Trusted With Leisure?"

Miss Webster is tentatively scheduled to present "Readings from Shakespeare."

Directed 18 Plays

She has directed some 18 Shakespearean productions, among them: the Maurice Evans "Richard II" and "Hamlet," the Helen Hayes "Twelfth Night" and the Robeson-Ferrer "Othello."

Starting her dramatic training in London, Miss Webster made her debut in John Barrymore's "Hamlet."

Since her return to her native New York, she has directed or acted in numerous productions including: "Family Portrait," "The Devil's Disciple" and "Therese and Saint John."

Author of Shakespeare Book
She was co-founder, actress and director for the American Repertory theater, and has recently earned the distinction of being the first woman to stage opera at the Metropolitan opera house. She is the author of "Shakespeare Without Tears," and is writing an autobiography, tentatively titled "Webster Unabridged."

She is a member of the boards or councils of many theatrical organizations and has received honorary degrees from a number of colleges and universities, as well as numerous awards and citations for her work in the field of classical and educational theater.

Nash, the evening speaker, has been both a teacher and a superintendent of recitation. He was a director of physical education in California for two years, was a professor of PE at New York university and since this fall he has held his post at Brigham Young university.

Works in Many Groups

In addition to his work in education, Nash has been prominent in many recreation organizations. He has been president of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, and has been chairman of the department of school health and physical education of the National Education association, and has been a national chairman of physical education of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and a member of the joint health committee of the American Education association.

Nash was one of the founders of the American Academy of Physical Education. A prominent author in his field, Nash has written some 15 books on physical education.

During 1953-54 school year, Nash served as Fulbright professor in India, specializing in teacher training for potential Indian educators and acting as an adviser to the Indian government.
