

Six Grid Stars Share Honors

LOS ANGELES-(Special)-Top offensive honors in the Pacific Coast conference were shared by a half-dozen men during the 1954 football season, it was disclosed this week by figures from the PCC commissioner's office.

With the figures completed, except for one Southern California game, most of the individual statistical titles have now been cinched. Bill Tarr, Stanford, is atop the rushing columns with 729 yards and an average of 4.7 per play with Jerry Drew, California, second, 715 yards.

California's Paul Larson captured the passing title with 125 completions to 91 for second-ranked George Shaw, Oregon, and his completion percentage of 64.1% smashed the existing conference and national record of 60.99% set by Don Heinrich, Washington, in 1950. Larson had only eight passes intercepted and threw 10 touchdown passes, as did Shaw.

Shaw bested Larson in total offense 1536 yards to 1485 with Larson being responsible for 15 touchdowns, Primo Villanueva, UCLA, 14, and Shaw, 13. Tied for the scoring lead were Bob Davenport, UCLA, and Dick James, Oregon, with 11 touchdowns each for 66 points.

Jim Hanifan, California end, posted the second-highest total in conference history to win the pass receiving title. His 44 receptions were good for 569 yards and seven touchdowns. John Stewart, Stanford, has 36 receptions and Jim Carmichael, California, 33. Ed Barker, Washington State, set the reception record of 46 in 1951.

In other departments, Bob Iverson, Washington State; Wilbur Gary, Idaho, and Bob Cox, Washington, tied for the top spot in pass interceptions, each having intercepted five. Jim Withrow, Oregon State, finished with a narrow margin over Bob Heydenfeldt, UCLA, in punting with an average of 40.5 yards to 39.9.

Sam Brown, UCLA, amassed the most yards on punt returns, 262, and Larson the most kickoff return yards, 281.

Statistics Title Won by Uclans

LOS ANGELES-(Special)-UCLA has apparently captured eight of 10 statistical titles and has contributed a new conference record, as did California, according to figures released by the Pacific Coast Conference Commissioner's office.

UCLA leads in every department except pass offense, where California has a 172.4 yard game average, and pass defense which Oregon heads with 91.9 yards.

California established its conference mark by compiling a 61.0% pass completion record, surpassing the former conference record of 57.3% (Washington, 1950) and the former national record of 57.5% (Illinois, 1952). California completed 139 of 228 passes for 1724 yards and 10 touchdowns and had only 12 intercepted.

UCLA's new conference record was a defensive performance, the Bruins allowing opponents only 659 yards rushing in nine games for an average of 73.3 yards per contest. The old record of 715 yards was set by Southern California in 1943 in eight games.
