U.N. Officials Won't 'Talk' Of Formosa

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — Reports that a UN Security Council meeting is to be held soon to discuss a Formosa area cease-fire grew Sunday night, but persons most directly concerned declined to confirm the rumors.

Sir Leslie Knox Munro, New Zealand ambassador and UN Security Council president for January, returned to New York from Washington accompanied by his prime minister, Sidney Holland.

They are to call on UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold Monday. Munro acknowledged that the question of the Formosa Strait fighting probably would come up in their talks.

Munro, Britain's Sir Pierson Dixon and Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., U.S. chief delegate, conferred about such a move last week after President Eisenhower said that he would welcome a cease-fire step by the UN.

Munro declined to confirm the London Times dispatch from Washington which speculated that he intended to summon the 1-nation Council into session within the next few days.

Red UN 'Pull' Termed Low

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—After two hectic years of verbal dueling with the Russians, Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. says he is convinced Moscow's influence in the U. N. is at an "all-time low."

Conversely, he says, with obvious pride that American satisfaction with the progress of the U. N. is at an all-time high.

"I'm glad to see that happen," he said in an exclusive interview marking the end of two years as the head of the U. S. mission to the United Nations. "I think I had something to do with that."

Lodge summed up his philosophy of the assignment in this way:

"The job here is essential to the life and liberty of the American people. While the U. N. has not worked out in the way people thought it would from a legal point of view, it has become a vital forum of public opinion. This makes the place absolutely vital.

"Second, it is a center for harmonizing differences and in that it has measured up to expectations. The challenge of the future is to get more countries in the U. N. I would eliminate the veto on the admission of new members."

That is all he would do with the veto. He would not change its application to the use of military force by the big powers. He would use it to bar Red China from a place on the Security Council — on that point he is clear, definite and final.

Lodge said his mission when he came to the U. N. Jan. 26, 1953, was to restore public faith in the U. N. After two years, he said, he feels he has achieved that mission to a great extent.

Lodge seemed happiest about the unanimous vote achieved in the assembly last session for a resolution endorsing President Eisenhower's atoms-for-peace Plan. He worked harder to achieve this unity than he has worked on any other single proposal in the U. N.

Lodge listed some of the other achievements during his two years here.
