

Cellar-Stuck Huskies Visit Webfoot Quint

Still smarting from last weekend's two defeats at the hands of the league-leading Oregon State quintet, Tippy Dye's basement-bound Washington Huskies will attempt to regain their early-season stride against Bill Borchers' second-place Oregon team in a Northern Division series to-night and Saturday at MacArthur Court.

Picked by most observers as ND title threats along with OSC, the Huskies have managed to win only two of their six conference games. Four of the losses have come against the Beavers, the first time in 51 years of basketball play between the schools that a sweep has been scored by either side. Dye's five trounced Idaho and WSC once each, only to lose close decisions the following night.

Oregon, rated for a lower finish before the season, is solidly entrenched in second, sporting a 5-3 mark. The Webfoot losses have come against the WSC Cougars and Oregon State. The Beaver games saw the Ducks losing by two points the first night and three the next.

Though mired in the cellar now, Dye still has hopes for a high finish. He announced earlier this week that his team had a tough road ahead to climb out of the cellar, but that he thought "we have the ability and the desire to do it."

Dye's main hopes in the Oregon series appear to rest with his veteran and potentially high-scoring front line of Dean Parsons, Jim Coshow and Karl Voegtlin. The 6'7" Parsons, a product of Eugene high school, tops the Huskies in scoring from his center spot, boasting 134 points in eight ND tilts, a 16.8 average.

Rounding out the first five with Parsons will probably be Coshow and Voegtlin at forwards and Doyle Perkins and Ron Olsen at the guard slots. Regular guard Jerry Johnson is out with a knee injury incurred in the Washington State series two weeks ago. The 6'4" Olsen has been seeing action in his place.

Coshow and Voegtlin are highly-rated by opposing coaches. Standing 6'6" and 6'4" respectively, they have 10.3 and 9.8 scoring averages thus far. Both are juniors and saw considerable action last season, Voegtlin making the all-Northern Division second team. Perkins stands 6 feet, and is a junior regular from last year.

Oregon reached a season's peak in points scored in the two Brigham Young games last weekend, going over the 80-point level each night. Of course, it was the Duck's big gun, Jim Loscutt, who came through with 35 and 24 points to lead the way.

Borchers has been getting good balance from his first five in scoring, and the performance of Max Anderson in netting 24 the second night against BYU was encouraging. He will probably get a starting berth against the Huskies, along with either Ray Bell or Jerry Ross. Howard Page and Phil McHugh will remain at guard.

In last season's games at Eugene, the Webfoots edged the Huskies in a thriller 77-76, and then came back to take an easy 64-48 win. The UW five won the first game played in Seattle by a 63-59 count with the Ducks coming back for a 67-59 finale win.

Oregon will travel to Seattle for the final two Washington games on Feb. 18 and 19.

JIM COSHOW will beat the starting forward spot tonight for the Washington Huskies when Oregon clashes with Coach Tippy Dye's cellar-dwelling club in McArthur court.

Frosh to Face Marion Motors

Don Kirsch's Ducklings will be looking for their first win after five defeats tonight, as they meet Marion Motors, a Salem AAU club, at McArthur court. Saturday night they take on Clark junior college's powerful Penguins. Both games are scheduled for 5:45.

Clark is paced by their 6'5" center, Fletcher Frazier, who dumped in 24 points in the Penguins' 91-61 drubbing of Yakima JC Wednesday night.

Clark Trio Hits

Three other Penguins scored in double figures in that game. Forward Fred Dills collected 14, Vern Coulter got 13, and Ken Boydston got 12.

Clark is league leader in the Washington Junior College conference and up to Thursday night, when it met Wenatchee JC, it had only one defeat on its conference record. Oregon State's Rooks defeated the Penguins in a tight game earlier in the season.

Kirsch will open with his usual starting five, including Paul Tucharadt and Dave Wanaka at the forwards, Hal Duffy at center and Wendy Razor and Wimp Hastings in backcourt. Tucharadt and Wanaka are one-two in individual scoring, with Tucharadt averaging 15 points-per-game and Wanaka 9.

Frosh Reserves Shine

Top reserves have been Martin Swan and Bob Faris, forwards and Bob Ayre and Don Delbon, guards. Kirsch will probably also call on Ted Tenney and Lowell Slick, two little-used ball players who nearly saved the game for the Ducklings against Fernandez Loggers last Saturday.

Drills this week have concentrated on defense, where the Frosh seem to be weakest. Kirsch was bothered with the "defensive lapses" displayed by his squad in the recent games, but thinks the workouts with the varsity reserves have had a good effect.

Kirsch complimented Tenney and Slick for their performances in Saturday's 68-66 heartbreaker, and was pleased with the second half comeback on the part of the whole squad. The Frosh came from a 37-27 halftime margin to tie the score in the dying minutes. Duffy's rebound work also came in for a word of praise. The 6'6" center snared 20 recoveries against the Loggers.

The Ducklings now have a 2-5 record on the season.

Sigma Chi's Win In B Title Play

Championship play in both A and B leagues highlighted Thursday intramural action as Sigma Chi, Sederstrom hall and Hale Kane all won hard-fought games to take their division titles.

The last quarter made the difference in Sigma Chi's 25-16 victory over Alpha Tau Omega in a B division league playoff. The Sigs held the ATO's scoreless, while rolling up seven points to pull out the win.

The ATO's were on top, 10-5, at the first quarter, but failed to hit any free throws throughout the tilt, while Sigma Chi totaled 11 charity tosses in taking the edge.

Sederstrom Mops Up

Sederstrom remained undefeated in league play and picked up the title in its division of the A conference as it edged Alpha hall, 20-18.

Bob Steinmetz topped the winners with 6 and Norio Takayama and George McKnight led Alpha also with 6 apiece.

Delts Squeezed

Sigma Nu managed to squeeze by Delta Tau Delta, 20-19, in a tightly played B game Thursday.

The Delts led most of the first half and were on top, 12-6, at the half, but Sigma Nu waged a scoring drive that saved the game for them.

No individual scoring was available for the game.

Phils Field Too Few

Philadelphia house fielded three men for its A game with Campbell club Thursday, but they weren't enough and the clubbers got a forfeit victory.
