Morse to Deliver Political Address

PORTLAND (AP) — Sen. Morse (Ind-Ore) will deliver a "major political address" in Portland Thursday night, Democratic leaders have announced.

Morse planned to return to the state several weeks ago to plan campaign strategy for the 1956 election but was prevented from doing so because of Senate debate on the Formosa question, a party official stated.

Some Democrats have been urging the Oregon senator, who bolted the Republican party in the 1952 presidential campaign, to seek re-election as a Democrat.

Meeting to Select Convention Place

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower returned from a brief vacation in Georgia Sunday and arranged to confer with Republican leaders Monday about the selection of a date and place for next year's GOP presidential nominating convention.

Chicago and Philadelphia have been leading contenders for the convention thus far, but San Francisco was added to the list of possibilities when it became known that the city was planning to match the Chicago and Philadelphia bids of $250,000.

Inquiries

While the White House was remaining aloof from convention site speculation, an assistant to Republican national chairman Leonard Hall said Mayor Elmer E. Robinson and other civic and business leaders had been making active inquiries about holding the 1956 nominating convention in the San Francisco Cow Palace.

Hall's assistant, Robert Humphreys, said that the San Franciscans were told they would receive the same consideration as Chicago and Philadelphia if they submitted a formal bid.

Conference

Plans for the White House conference were announced as the President prepared to leave

Thomasville, Ga., for the flight back to Washington after a weekend of rest and a little quail shooting at the plantation estate of Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey.

In advance of departure Press Secretary James C. Hagarty told newsmen Eisenhower still had the cold which kept him indoors Saturday. The President caught it hunting quail in the cold rain Friday.

Pope Improving; Celebrates Mass

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Pius XII celebrated mass in his private chapel Sunday. It was the first time he had done so since he became gravely ill in December.

After mass, he received Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, French-born dean of the college of cardinals, in a 30-minute private audience. This was taken as further evidence of the pontiff's steady and continuing improvement in health.

An informed source said the Pope now is expected to hold a series of meetings with the cardinals present in Rome, probably one each day. He has been advised, however, not to resume just yet the general audiences he frequently gave for pilgrims and other visitors to Rome.
