Tuition Scholarship Offered For Israel Study and Travel

The Israel Workshop alumni organization of New York university announces the offer of a tuition scholarship for summer study and travel in Israel.

The award is made on the basis of scholastic achievement, character, financial need, and desire to promote American-Israel friendship and understanding.

The workshop is designed to provide first-hand study of Israel's language, literature, educational system, and governmental and cultural institutions.

Applications for the scholarship must be made before May 2. They should be addressed to Jack Mandel, Israel Workshop, 2 Washington Square North, New York 3, N.Y.

A student at the University of Arizona received the 1954 scholarship.

Gardner, Lewis Write in Contest

Joe Gardner and Dick Lewis, seniors in journalism, have been chosen as candidates from Oregon's school of journalism for the most outstanding journalism student in the United States.

Both Lewis and Gardner do a story on assignment from the Register-Guard. The managing editor will judge the two stories.

The national winner will be flown to Europe on an assignment from his home newspaper. He will be paired with a foreign news reporter.

The contest is sponsored by the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children in New York to publicize the destitute condition of foreign children.

Gardner's story appeared in the Sunday Register-Guard. His topic was a six-year-old girl attending the Pearl Buck school for retarded children.

University Alumna Is Magazine Editor

Mrs. LeJeune Whitney Griffith, 1948 journalism graduate of the University, has been named editor of the National Chinchilla Breeder. The magazine is published monthly in Salt Lake City, Utah, and distributed in the United States and foreign countries.

Mrs. Griffith was at the University from 1946 to 1948, was reporter and drama editor of the Emerald and a member of the University Theater Advisory Board, Theta Sigma Phi, Phi Beta and National Collegiate Players.

She won the University Theater award in 1947, and was business manager of the theater for two years following her graduation. Her husband, Carl T. Griffith, is a University law graduate who is practicing in Utah.

Sorenson Links Religion, Business

Entrepreneurs in the Western world worked with ascetic enthusiasm, spending profits not in luxury, but pouring them back into business.

That was the phenomena Dr. L. R. Sorenson, assistant professor of history, explored in his SU browsing room lecture, "Calvinism and Capitalism" last Friday night.

Before a crowd of about 70, Sorenson examined the particular theology of Calvinism, belief in pre-destination and an omnipotent God, and explained how it fostered a race of men thrifty and industrious.

In conclusion Sorenson said that although the theology behind Calvinism has largely disappeared, the ethic continues because of competitive pressure.
