Swimmers Set Husky Contest

Oregon's varsity swimmers move into Seattle tomorrow to meet the Washington Huskies, perennial Northern Division power, in the season's final dual meet prior to the conference contest in the University's men's pool March 4-5.

John Borchardt's Webfoots have a 1-3 record going into the Husky event, having lost twice to Oregon State and once to the Washington State Cougars. The Ducks beat Idaho for their only win.

A feature of the UW-UO event should be the 1500-yard freestyle contest with Harry Fuller of the Webfoots meeting a Husky ace. Fuller is also expected to show strongly in the 440-freestyle against Larry Dalrymple of Washington, a prime threat for division titles.

Another close race should be the 50-yard freestyle in which Howard Hedinger of Oregon will tangle with Dan Cramer of the Huskies, an ex-Oregon high school champion from Grant in Portland.

Swimming for the Webfoots will be Hedinger, Fuller, Phil Lewis, Jim England, Bob Hays, Yogi Matsushima, Jerry Froebe and Gene Bowles, while Walter Ching will do the diving.

Oregon Pavilion May Host Playoff

Oregon's McArthur court may be the site for the NCAA sub-regional playoff if the western committee extends an invitation to the University for the March 8-9 games, it was learned Thursday.

The Cow Palace in San Francisco is the other site reportedly being considered for the games between San Francisco and the Border conference champion and Seattle university and Idaho State.

Oregon's arena was thought to be approved for a playoff site by at least three of the four schools—Seattle, USF and Idaho State. The winners of the games will go on to the Western regionals at Gill coliseum in Corvallis March 11-12.

No league titles are on the line, but two more hard-fought basketball games are expected tonight and Saturday at Corvallis and Eugene when the Oregon Ducks, fighting to hold a second-place finish in the Northern Division, meet the champion Oregon State Beavers in the season's final series.

Bill Borchers's Webfoots wind up their season with the two OSC encounters, while the Orangemen will face UCLA in the North-South PCC playoff on March 4-5 in Corvallis. The Staters will be gunning for a spot in the Western NCAA regionals, also booked for Gill Coliseum, the following weekend.

Gill's five outlasted Oregon in two thrilling games five weeks ago by 56-53 and 56-54 scores. The first game at Eugene was decided only in the final few seconds and it took an overtime game to down Oregon in the Saturday game at Corvallis.

Oregon State has already retained possession of the Chancellor's trophy, given annually to the winner of the OSC-Oregon hoop series. The Beavers won the first two series in 1952 and 1953, split last year and have earned at least a split this season already.

Form charts can usually be tossed out for this slate of games, with both teams generally rising to the occasion and playing their best ball of the season.

Since the first games, however, the Oregon State cause has been bolstered considerably by the addition of 7'3" Swede Halbrook, defending ND scoring titlist, to full-time action. Currently standing third in the scoring race with Washington's Dean Parsons, the giant junior will be making his final bid for the crown for this year.

Oregon's main strength, as usual, is found in big Jim Loscutoff, the 6'5" senior who is second in the ND scoring totals behind Ron Bennink of WSC but tops in the averages. Bennink has completed his season, though, while Loscutoff has two games to go.

Max Anderson, who has always had good luck in defending against Halbrook, will probably get the assignment of guarding the Swede both nights. The 6'7" duck star has been a rival of Halbrook since high school days in Portland and has been able to hold him down below his usual average.

Behind Halbrook, though, the Beaver five has many seasoned and usually-underrated performers. This fact was demonstrated in the first Oregon series, when Halbrook was under a suspension the first night and saw only a quarter of play the next night. Forward Tony Vlastelica, still the point leader over the entire season, led the Staters with 24 points in the first game and little Ron Robins dumped in a two-hander with seconds to go for the overtime win.

State are Forward Jay Dean, a rugged rebounding junior at 6'5"; Guard Bill Toole, who sparked the Beavers in the Washington series; Center Tex Whiteman, a capable "pinch-hitter" all season; Guard-Forward Reggie Halligan, probably the best-driving player the Beavers have, and another 7-footer, Phil Shadoin.

Against this imposing array, Borchers will use Loscutoff at center, Anderson and Jerry Ross at forwards, and Phil McHugh and Howard Page at the guard slots. This quint gave the Beavers plenty of trouble in the two previous games and is easily capable of turning in a pair of upsets.

Another factor in favor of Oregon is that the Beavers will probably be looking ahead to the playoff games with tough UCLA, rather than concentrating wholly on the Webfoots, figuring to take them in stride. Their unbeaten string was shattered by WSC last weekend and they no longer have to fight to remain undefeated.

Loscutoff and Halbrook have never played against each other except for the short time in the second game earlier this season and it should be quite a meeting. The Duck stalwart will be completing his college career while Halbrook is at the peak of his season, having dumped in over 30 points on two recent occasions.

Finishing their collegiate careers will be seniors Page and Loscutoff, while Vlastelica, Whiteman, Halligan, Robins, Ron Fundingsland, Toole and Johnny Jarboe will be playing their last Northern Division game, all being seniors also.

Capacity crowds are expected for each arena for the games. The first two games drew 10,000 people at McArthur court and 11,500 at Gill coliseum.

In other action, the Washington Huskies will pin their hopes of a second-place finish on a pair of wins over the Idaho Vandals at Moscow while they hope Oregon takes two losses from OSC. The UW five stands two games back of Oregon and must win two with the Ducks losing two.

Frosh to Host Return Match

Oregon's Frosh wrestlers will be at home this weekend for a Saturday afternoon match at 1 p.m. in McArthur court, with the Portland YMCA team. The Frosh won the first match held last week in Portland by a 22-7 count.

Oregon Wrestlers On Southern Trip

Oregon's varsity wrestlers will close out dual meet competition this-weekend when they travel to face San Jose Friday afternoon, Stanford Friday night, and California Saturday afternoon.

The Ducks are back at full strength now that Roy Schlessler, far western champion, has returned in the 123-lb. division. Schlessler missed two matches because of a knee injury suffered in the OSC matches two weeks ago.

When the Ducks face San Jose State Friday afternoon, they will have their hands full, for the Spartans finished second in the Pacific coast race last year. Friday evening Stanford's Indians will host the Ducks, and hold the edge over the Webfoots because of experience.

Saturday Bill Hammer's matmen will be tangling with California, who edged the Ducks by a 20-10 score last year, although Oregon managed to capture four out of the six matches.

The Oregons will return home Sunday and then resume practice in preparation for the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate Championship matches March 11-12 at San Luis Obispo, Calif.
