

Containment Through Strength Advocated for Chinese Commies

second would," Dull said, "lead to war."

The Chinese communists, Dull said, hold to the Marxist position that revolution must be world-wide to be successful even if force must be used to carry it out.

"The Chinese," he said, "have added an emotional hatred of the Chinese nationalists and the US to their belief in the communist ideology."

Dull expressed doubt that any action could now change this hatred and said that if we recognized the Reds Formosa would eventually fall. He noted the military importance of Formosa and added that many of the Asiatic nations respect power and "if we give up Formosa it might have serious repercussions in other Asiatic countries."

"Don't Add Irritation"
"Give them a line," Dull suggested, "and say don't cross it but do not try to add to the emotional irritation. Meanwhile, wait for the hatreds to cool."

Dull maintained that the Reds do not really want recognition or membership in the UN and said that he did not want to see them in the UN because he doubts whether Mao would obey the rules of the organization.

Stronger Organization
"The eventual answer," Dull said, "if it can ever be realized, is recognition and admission to a stronger international organization which would enforce its rules."

J. V. Berreman, professor of sociology, advocated recognition of Red China. He maintained that:

"The Chinese communist government is firmly in control of the Chinese mainland.

"Chiang Kai-Shek's nationalist government is a lost cause. Nothing short of war, with US intervention, could put him back in power. The Chinese people have overwhelmingly turned against the Nationalists.

"The men in the Red Chinese government are not all puppets of the Kremlin. The Chinese are too proud to be puppets of any foreign regime.

"For us to conquer China would be no weekend undertaking, even if Russia remained neutral. It would take years because of the nature of China and even then we would have to occupy it a long time and rebuild the country at our expense."

"Alternative—Co-Existence"
The only alternative, Berreman said, is co-existence.

The failure of the US to recognize the communist government will result in a lack of communications, Berreman said, and thus increase the possibility of war.

The only hope, he added, is that Titoism will split the communist world.

"Recognition," Berreman said, "does not represent approval—only a practical consideration."
