

Biography by Speech Head Due for Publication Soon

Robert D. Clark's biography of the life of Matthew Simpson, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church from 1852 until his death in 1884, has been accepted for publication by the MacMillan company.

Clark is head of the University speech department and assistant dean of the college of liberal arts. He has been working on the biography over a period of 10 to 12 years. He spent the 1950-51 school year in the south studying the Bishops on a Guggenheim fellowship.

Simpson was important in the political world of his time. As a middle of the night and nobody gave a hell. If he flunked out of school because he hadn't written three poems maybe he would write a stream-of-consciousness novel like Maybe not. You could get enough of that salad awfully fast. He began typing again.

The ground is so soft;
And the sky is soft above it
Do you like Coca-Cola?
Gee, kid, I love it.

In a maternity dress, Why the hell don't you go to bed, Dante, you're beat, you're all mused out or up or under, pick your location, and you don't know pentameter from peanuts and iambs from apostrophe pee and that apple didn't do any good down there, that's for sure.

He went over to the window and opened it. There were some stars out there, and a car went past. He wished he was in the car going someplace. Someplace like Monterey. He'd never been there, but you were supposed to want to go there because it was real avant guard however-the-hell you spelled that. Except that he'd read someplace that all the really sincere people were going to Big Sur, now; he guess things were more sincere at Big Sur than at Monterey.

It was maybe a little late to be a poet. Late in the day and late in life. That guy wrote Thanatopsis when he was seventeen and here I am twenty and can only rhyme Mabel with able.

He went over to the typewriter, inserted a fresh sheet of paper and wrote "Good-bye Forever" on it. Then he lugged the typewriter to the window, let it balance excitedly on the sill for a moment, and then, with his little finger, pushed it over.

It smashed, in incredible beauty, upon the sidewalk below. Then he went to bed. He felt more like a man, more like a member-of the gender. Poetry, he thought to himself as he went to sleep, is no-goetry.

Dante's aunties.

Phi Eta Sigma to Start Graduate Scholarship

Phi Eta Sigma, national honorary society for freshmen men, has established a scholarship for the 1955-56 school year in honor of Scott H. Goodnight, who served as dean of men at the University of Wisconsin for nearly 30 years.

The scholarship was made possible by a gift from Charles Thompson, president of Phi Eta Sigma and former dean of the College of Commerce at the University of Illinois. It is to be awarded under the same conditions as the three $300 cash scholarships established earlier under the Founders Fund of the society.

The Goodnight scholarship will be available for first year graduate work and will be awarded to Phi Eta Sigma members on the basis of scholarship, character, personality, evidence of creative ability, financial need and promise of success in a chosen field.

Applications for the Goodnight and other Phi Eta Sigma scholarships can be obtained from James E. Foy, grand secretary of Phi Eta Sigma, Alabama Polytechnic institute, Auburn, Ala.

Goodnight was a leader in the founding of Wisconsin's chapter of Phi Eta Sigma in 1927 and has served as national president of the honor society.

There's even more to Chevrolet styling than meets the eye!

This is beauty with a bonus . . . for Chevrolet styling is designed to add safety and comfort while you drive, and to return greater value when you trade.

Truly modern lines are shaped by usefulness. You can see what we mean in the deep crystal curve of Chevrolet's Sweep-Sight windshield . . . a dramatic style note, certainly, but one that stems from the need for wider, safer vision. Or take high-set taillights—they add to the impressive length of line . . . but they are up where they can be seen for safety's sake.

The smart louvers across the hood aren't just decoration . . . they mark the intake for the High-Level ventilation system for cleaner, fresher air. And the whole shape of the body—its lowness, the dipped belt line—is merely a reflection of a lowered center of gravity, the added stability.

This is truly functional styling that serves you better every mile, and preserves its value against the distant day when you trade. This is Body by Fisher—another Chevrolet exclusive in the low-price field. Come in and let us demonstrate that this new Chevrolet is just as exciting to drive as to look at!
