Pierce First Speaker In Coffee Hour Series

Jack Pierce, graduate in anthropology, will be the first speaker in a newly-planned Friday night coffee hour series this Friday.

Ann Ogle, chairman of the browsing room committee, said that the purpose of allowing students to speak will result in good experience for the students. Too often, she declared, students are confined to presenting their ideas to their own circle of acquaintances.

To Feature Students

The coffee hour series will feature a student speaker each Friday night at 7:30 in the browsing room.

The subject of the first talk will be "Homeostasis and Hokum."

Pierce, a cultural anthropologist, claims that self-regulation lets students accept a lot of hokum.

Students Gullible

Pierce was confronted with this situation as a grader. He sat in on a freshman anthropology class all last year and observed the easy way in which students accepted what the teacher said.

Pierce said that students should subject scrutiny to what their teachers tell them. They do o disservice to themselves and to education when they do not, he added.

Miss Bernice Rice, browsing room librarian, said that any students desiring to speak at future coffee hours should contact her.

Sanborn to Open YW Leadership Training Week

G. A. Sanborn, instructor in speech, will give the first speech in a series of lectures included in the annual YWCA leadership training week.

Sanborn's lecture deals with effective leadership of group discussions. He will explain the goal of most discussion groups and the way these goals may best be attained. The role played by the group leader will be emphasized.

The second in the series of lectures will be given Wednesday afternoon by Herbert Bisno, assistant professor of sociology. Bisno will speak on group dynamics, using demonstration groups to emphasize various types of group meetings. He will stress the role of each member of a group and explain group interaction.

This "Y" sponsored leadership training program is held to help those who are now holding campus offices to become better leaders. This year the program will take place April 5, 6 and 7. Tuesday and Wednesday's lectures will be held in the Student Union from 4 till 5 p.m. and are open to the public.

Wilson to Address Banking Meeting

University President O. Meredith Wilson will be guest speaker at the Friday evening banquet of the Northwest Banking conference which will be held April 7 and 8, at Pullman, Wash.

E. C. Robbins, instructor in economics, will participate in a discussion of a paper on monetary policy which will be delivered by Allan Sproul, president of the Federal Reserve Bank at New York.
