

EYES OF ENGLAND ARE ON CHURCHILL, EDEN

USSR Makes 'No Comment'

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL, bundled in overcoat, arrived at Buckingham Palace to confer with Queen Elizabeth. Churchill announced his resignation as Prime Minister of England Tuesday. Sir Anthony Eden (right) will succeed the statesman.

LONDON (AP)—Moscow radio reported without comment to the Russian people Tuesday the resignation of Sir Winston Churchill as Britain's prime minister.

But from other capitals of the world came plenty of comment. It praised Churchill's service and expressed hope that he will continue to offer his counsel to his country and the world.

President Rene Coty of France cabled Churchill saying: "France, united with Great Britain and all free peoples, renders you affectionate homage and extends her admiration and recognition."

In behalf of the entire French cabinet, Premier Edgar Faure sent greetings and said:

"Your departure from the government does not signify the end of your public life. We know that your counsels will continue to inspire the policy of your country."

Former Premier and Foreign Minister Georges Bidault, a top wartime resistance leader, said Churchill was "a symbol of liberty in our darkest hour."

West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer said in a statement: "It is one of Sir Winston's greatest services that the Western world now lives in freedom. All of us in the free world need his counsel and will continue to seek it."

Churchill Resigns Post; Anthony Eden Takes Over

By JAMES F. KING

LONDON (AP)—Under the weight of his 80 years Sir Winston Churchill stepped down Tuesday night as Britain's prime minister—still flashing the champion's V-for-Victory sign.

He thus cleared the way for his political heir, Sir Anthony Eden, to become prime minister Wednesday and take up the fight of the nationwide election campaign just ahead.

New Government Postponed

Queen Elizabeth II, moved at the retirement of her first minister, broke with normal procedure and held off summoning the 57-year-old Eden to form a new government. It was a sympathetic gesture of a young queen to an old statesman who first served under her great grandmother, Queen Victoria. This was to be his day.

For months Churchill stubbornly resisted pleadings of his wife, doctor and friends to take things easier. Tuesday he gave in, put on his Sunday best with top hat and gold watch chain, and rode from Downing Street to Buckingham Palace to tender his resignation.

"Good Ole Winnie"

Shouts of the thousands milling outside—echoing the "Good Ole Winnie" of days of triumph—set his pink-cheeked face beaming. He waved a silent thanks.

Churchill spent 41 minutes in the palace with the Queen and then emerged—still smiling. He slowly climbed into the back seat and sat back puffing a big cigar in the manner of a man relaxed by the lifting of a weight from his shoulders.

Wednesday, the official tributes begin in the House of Commons, with leaders of all parties speaking.

Political life came to standstill for the moment as the news of Churchill's resignation spread. Only 20 members lounged on the green benches of the House of Commons when word reached Parliament.

Quickly the lobbies began to bustle as members moved into clusters and whispered. There was a slight melancholy air about the whole building—with even Churchill's political enemies feeling the impact.

Foreign Secretary Eden, the loyal protege and friend who is inheriting Churchill's mantle, was absent.

Cabinet to Remain

The Churchill cabinet has offered its resignation, in accord with tradition, but Eden is expected to keep the same Conservative party team that has ruled the nation since 1951.

Eden is expected to relinquish his old job when he moves up to prime minister. Defense Minister Harold Macmillan likely will be foreign secretary in the Eden cabinet. Macmillan, whose family controls the big Macmillan publishing house, served under President Eisenhower in North Africa.

Churchill himself has no inclination to serve in the cabinet and reportedly had adjusted himself to a role as elder statesman—making only occasional appearances in the Commons.

VETS' NEWS

Several inquiries have been received this last week from newly enrolled veterans as to the manner in which their schooling entitlement is deducted.

There seems to be a mistaken idea among some veterans that a whole month is deducted even if the veteran only attends school a portion of a month. For the benefit of these new students, deductions are made on a day by day basis; i.e., if an enrollment started on the 24th day of a certain month then the VA would deduct only the balance of the month, etc.

New students attention is also called to the importance of signing the monthly reports of attendance forms, 7-1996a. If a veteran wants to receive his check, this report must be signed the first of every month. This will be certified by the school and mailed to the VA. If it is duly submitted on time the veteran then receives his check the 20th of the following month. If not signed on time, the veteran's check could possibly be held up for another whole month.
