Oregon Prepares to Inject Salk Vaccine

PORTLAND (AP) — Oregon may be ready to start its Salk vaccine injections for school children next week.

There is no Salk serum available in the state now, but planes will be ready to fly serum to every part of the state Saturday morning, if the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis has sent serum to the state by that time.

There are 84,350 first and second-grade school children eligible for the inoculation against polio, and already parents have asked local health departments for inoculations for 55,550 of them. That is 66 per cent of those eligible.

Health officials believe the final total may run to 95 per cent of those eligible.

Dr. Harold M. Erickson, state health officer, advised people not to "heckle" their doctors for the serum, since none now is available.

"We will advise when the serum is available," he said.

Three Civil Air Patrol planes will be ready to fly serum Saturday morning, if an air shipment

Library Graduates Offered Scholarship

The Marcia M. Hill scholarship of $150 is now being offered by the Oregon Library association to students interested in obtaining the Master of Librarianship degree at the University of Washington.

The candidate should have completed four years of college, satisfied University of Washington School of Librarianship entrance requirements, and indicated his intention to take a position in some area of library work in Oregon for at least one year after receiving the library degree.

The award will be made on the basis of personal qualifications for library service, academic record, and the promise of future contribution in the field of library service.

Application blanks for the scholarship may be obtained from Miss Eleanor Ahlers, assistant professor of library science, school of education. Applicants should also make application for entrance to the University of Washington School of Librarianship, Miss Gladys Boughton, director.

has been received then from the national foundation.

Health groups in the Portland area will pick up their share of the serum for their local use. Marion County officials also will pick it up here and distribute it for a number of nearby counties. The CAP planes will be used for the more remote areas.

Dr. Erickson said it has not been determined whether Oregon will give the three-shot series originally planned, or the newly recommended two-shot series with a booster seven months later. He said he has wired the national foundation for a recommendation and determination of policy.

Drug firms said the demand for the serum is "terrific." They have none of the serum now, but expect to get some for general use later.

Mother's Weekend Chairmen Named

Mother's Day weekend sub-chairmen have been chosen by Karen Kraft and Margaret Tyler, recently-selected co-chairmen of the weekend.

Subchairmen are Arlene Clark and Evelyn Nelson, registration; Joanne Jolley and Shirley Bostad, breakfast; Nancy Shaw and Frances Heitkemper, hospitality; Leola Lorenzen and Susan Ryder, tickets.

Jim Carter and Dick Allen, housing; Peggy Gathercoal and Gordon Summers, promotion; Mary Haisler and Katie Rapp, tea; Jean Fay and Joyce Bearden, awards, and Ann Pettersen, general weekend secretary.

These sub-chairmen will meet Thursday at 1 p.m. in the Student Union, with room number to be posted.

Fire Chief Claims Mac Court Danger

Although McArthur Court meets the city fire code, Fire Chief Ed Surfus cited the building as a "big worry" to fire department officials in Eugene.

This statement came as the result of an inquiry from city councilman C. F. Shearer concerning safety precautions taken in Mac Court when it is occupied by a large crowd. He also asked about safety in the upper balconies, installed last year.

"In our opinion, the building is not adequate for large crowds. It is a big worry," stated Surfus in his report. He was critical of University compliance with city fire codes when large crowds are drawn to the arena. He said his department has had to close the doors on large numbers if people who have already purchased tickets to events. Surfus stated that the city department has seen that aisles are kept open in most cases. He said, however, that he has complained "time and time again" of the overselling of tickets before the events.

Phi Theta Calls For Petitions Now

Petitions for membership in Phi Theta Upsilon, junior women's honorary, are available in the ASUO petition box on the third floor of the Student Union.

All sophomore women who have completed 80 hours, with a winter grade point average of at least a 2.4 and a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.4 are eligible to petition. Twenty women will be tapped.

Activities are to be listed on the petition in order of importance. No pictures are necessary.

The petitions may be turned in to Germaine LaMarche at Susan Campbell or to Sally Ryan at Carson 3.

Investigating Committees Miss Issue, Says Oxnham

The Congressional investigating committees have missed the whole issue, Bishop G. Bromley Oxnham told a press conference here Tuesday. They have concentrated on exposing people, and have made no effort to answer communism in any way.

Commenting on his own appearance before the House un-American activities committee, Oxnham said, "It was clear that the purpose of the committee was not to get the facts, but to get me."

This is an abuse of the purpose of investigating committees, he said. They have become courts with the policy of smearing people, rather than agencies to investigate the real problem of a communist threat.

This is about as sensible as health authorities putting a bubonic plague sign on a restaurant on the basis of an anonymous phone call without first checking to see if anyone in the restaurant is sick, he said.

"We are moving slowly toward world co-operation," he said. "Ultimately, we must have world law and order." Citing the relationship of the states, he said that eventually this feeling must be raised to an international level.

"There must be a difference somewhere between shooting arrows and dropping atomic bombs," Oxnham said. "Sooner or later we must face the fact that war itself is basically immoral."

"There is no question of a resurgence of religion in America," he said. "Church membership has increased from 5 percent at the time of the American Revolution to 57 percent today. However, in the long run, it is the quality, not the quantity of religion which is important," he said. A religion based on a person's material success by becoming a Christian is not enough. The American people want answers to the questions of the nature of man, and they are not finding them in materialism.
