

Theaters Offer Weekend Entertainment

By Bob Ross
Emerald Reporter

Lovers of the frontier will find ample entertainment in Eugene theaters this weekend.

"Man Without a Star" is currently at the Heilig with Kirk Douglas playing the part of an unfortunate man, who wanders all over the West because he hates barbed wire.

However, he stops off for a while on a ranch owned by Jeanne Crain, who is busily importing thousands of steers, as well as a bad man (Richard Boone) who giggles when he shoots.

Gold-lusting men, another feature of the West, may be found in the co-feature "The Yellow Mountain."

More Westerns On

James Cagney, who has not made a western for many years, is back as an ex-convict who has become sheriff of a cow town in "Run for Cover," opening Sunday at the McDonald. Cagney is interested in a homeless boy (John Derek), who reminds him of his son, Derek, in turn, is interested in a girl (Viveca Lindfors), who does not remind him of anyone.

The show has action as well as fatherly interest and romance as the town bank is robbed by hoodlums who are chased by Cagney, Derek, and others. The second feature is "Hobson's Choice."

The Eugene Drive-In is showing a version of the modern West in "Bad Day at Black Rock" Friday and Saturday. Spencer Tracy, in this interesting film, decides to spend a day in Black Rock which turns out to be quite a day. Two more westerns, "Two Guns and a Badge" at the Rex and "They Rode West" at the Motor-Vue Drive-In, are also being offered this weekend.

There are also some films playing in the Eugene area about people who live in cities rather than on cattle ranches and wear suits instead of levis.

Oscar Winner Playing

The academy award winner "The Caine Mutiny" starts Sunday at the North End Drive-In. "A Star is Born," which almost got Judy Garland the academy award, is back at the Mayflower for the weekend.

Playing at the McKenzie Friday and Saturday is "Battle Cry," an excellent picture about the marines in World War II. "Battle Cry" is not so much concerned with the battle field as it is with the emotional conflicts of men and women who find their lives disrupted by war.

Described as a "two handkerchief show," "Magnificent Obsession" will be on the screen at the Cascade Drive-In this weekend. Even though the movie is somewhat on the sentimental side, it is good entertainment. Mark Twain's story "Man With a Million" starring Gregory Peck is playing at the Lane this weekend.
