MORE TOMORROW

Rains Continue To Douse Ducks

By Bob Robinson

Emerald Assistant News Editor

Monday afternoon's pelting rainfall ended a brief clear spell in one of the gloomiest Aprils the University has even seen.

The rain, which held off most of Sunday while the sun occasionally peeked through the cloudy skies, returned in full force at shortly after noon Monday.

Oregon students had hopes at mid-morning for a second day without the soggy wetness. Don Kirsch's baseball team thought there was a possibility of getting in its first Northern Division baseball game of the season against the Idaho Vandals. A few optimistic students even went so far as to don their spring clothes as they trudged to their first morning classes.

The clouds, evidently observing the jovial hopefulness on the Oregon campus, congregated at about 11 Monday morning and a little more than an hour later they were spraying enough water on campus to dampen even the fondest hopes.

The weather bureau, which has given just about the same forecast each day for the past two weeks (unfortunately it has consistently been right), gave another of the same to the Emerald Monday afternoon. The forecast is for partly cloudy skies and more rain today and tonight. Although the bureau wouldn't give out any official prediction for the rest of the week, it did point out that it has no hopes for clearing weather in the next four or five days.

According to the bureau the rainfall for this month has been way over the average for a normal April. Rainfall has been 4.08 inches this month as compared to a normal of 2.54 inches. This figure does not include any of Monday's rain so it is sure to be much higher in a short time.

University students can only hope that the old axiom that "April showers bring May flowers" will come true this spring.

Manson Sums Up Christian Ethics

By Kay Macy
Emerald Reporter

The basis of Christian ethics is summed up in the Old Testament quotation, "Ye shall be as Holy as I am Holy," T. W. Manson, noted theologian, said in a lecture Monday night.

Manson went on to give an interpretation of the quotation, "Be ye perfect as He is perfect," saying that some distinction must be made between perfection and absolute perfection.

He said the only specifically new thing in Christian ethics is Jesus' injunction to "love one another as I have loved you," instead of the command to "love thy neighbor as thyself."

Manson explained that the Lord loved in a less selfish way than man would love.

He compared men following Jesus to students following a great painter. Both are under the influence of their leader, yet must apply his teachings to their own situations, he said.

Progress doesn't come by copying old masters, but from seeing what they have seen through our own eyes and applying it to present day needs, he continued.

Not a Mystery

Christian ethics lie before man

Don Peck Picked To Manage Book

Sue French, a junior in economics, was named editor of the 1956 Oregana by the student publications board Monday night. She was the only petitioner for the job.

The board also named a Pigger's Guide editor, business managers of the Guide and the Oregana, and recommended one person for editor of the Ore-Nter to the Senate and the office of student affairs.

Miss French was index editor on this year's Oregana, and was responsible for most of the house pages and identification of portraits. Her other activities include the Student Union art gallery committee, business manager of the 1954 exchange assembly, and junior adviser and member of the YWCA senior cabinet.

Peck Selected

Don Peck, sophomore in liberal arts, was named Oregana business manager. He was sales manager of the yearbook during winter and spring terms. He is also a member of the SU directorate and Skull and Dagger.

Mary Hyde, sophomore in mathematics, was the only other petitioner for the position.

Anne Ritchey, junior in journalism, was unopposed for her second year as editor of the Pigger's Guide. Miss Ritchey is also an ASUO senator-at-large and an AGS candidate for the same position next year. She is also an assistant news editor of the Emerald.

She is currently co-chairman of Junior Weekend queen selection and coronation.

Conrad Larson, sophomore in liberal arts, was named business manager of the Pigger's Guide. Larson was assistant business manager of this year's Guide. He is now business manager of the Junior Weekend-Canoe Fete souvenir program.

Donna Runberg, present business manager of the Emerald, was the only other petitioner for the position.

Lamb Recommended

The publications board also voted to recommend that Sue Lamb, freshman in liberal arts, be named editor of the 1955 Ore-Nter by the Senate and office of student affairs. She was the only candidate for the job.

Miss Lamb is now publicity chairman for the Canoe Fete and an Emerald reporter. She was also publicity chairman for the Frosh Sno-ball.

The publications board does not select the editor of the Ore-Nter, since money for its publication comes from fraternity and sorority rushing fees and other sources, rather than from state funds.

Subject for Browsing Room Lecture Listed

"Art of Mexico" will be the topic for this week's browsing room lecture to be held Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the browsing room of the Student Union. David P. Hatch, instructor in art, will deliver the lecture.

It will consist of a narrative while colored slides are being shown. The discussion leader will be W. S. Laughlin, associate professor of anthropology.

Allen Lecturer to Speak As Dedication Feature

Max Ascoli, editor and publisher of The Reporter magazine, will speak tonight at 8 in 221 Allen. He appears as another feature of the year long Allen hall dedication.

Ascoli, a native of Italy, was exiled in 1931 as a result of his opposition to fascism. In 1928 he was jailed for several weeks and his writings banned from all Italian publications. With the aid of the Rockefeller Foundation the former law professor came to the United States where he became a citizen in 1939.

In 1933 he joined the newly established Graduate Faculty of the New School for Social Research, where he has been a faculty member ever since. After two years of being dean there, he resigned to work for the government.

He directed intelligence and propaganda work in Latin America and traveled in most of the Latin American countries. For the economic and political rehabilitation of Italy, he started an American Foundation, Handicrafts Development, Inc. in 1945.

Since coming to this country he has written frequent articles for magazines and five books, the latest being "The Power of Freedom," and "The Fall of Mussolini."

All students are welcome to attend the lecture.
