

Letters to the Editor

'I'll Be Damned'

Emerald Editor:
I submit this letter, to the satisfaction of pent up emotions I felt at the Vodvil show, Friday night. To be frank, I thought the judging of the show to be the worst example of taste and fairness I have ever witnessed. When the results were announced at the close of the show Friday, my only comment was, "I'll be damned." And this feeling was not unique with me. From other and stronger remarks I heard Friday night, I surmise that many people were surprised, disgusted and just plain mad at the outcome.

Although many complaints were voiced by the disgruntled viewers, the most prevalent was, "What criteria did the judges use?" Certainly they did not consider which presentation was best prepared, or which presentation was best received by the high school seniors. The purpose of any type of production, and especially of vodvil shows, is to entertain. And yet the choice of the judges was certainly no indication that they had even considered entertainment as a factor in judging.

A second question asked by many pertained to the selection of judges. Is it logical to have professors and administrators of the University judging a student show put on for the benefit of high school seniors? And if this policy is to be followed, why no professors and instructors from the speech and drama school, people who have some knowledge of the entertainment field?

Why should an organization put many hours of work into creating a skit which from all appearances is a winner, only to have it subjected to the type of judging witnessed Friday night. I must say here, that while I did not think my organization had a "winner," I don't think we lost to the first choice of the judges.

In my opinion, the result of this type of judging could be apathy on the part of living organizations to enter campus competition.

Resolutions Not Kept Says Poll

Of those well-meaning souls who make New Year's resolutions, 53 percent of them really think they can keep them, according to an Associated Collegiate Press Poll of student opinion.

According to the results, it looks as if the men are more sure of their ability to keep resolutions. Fifty-nine percent of the men thought they could keep their resolutions.

When asked the question, "Of all the people making New Year's resolutions, what proportion do you think are serious about keeping them?" 73 percent of the students stated that few of the people keep their resolutions. From this it looks like the tradition of making New Year's resolutions is viewed skeptically by a large majority of college students, or at least they look at their neighbor's resolutions with a doubtful eye.

T. Neil Taylor Award Given

Joe Gardner, editor of the Emerald for the first half of the school year, has been awarded the T. Neil Taylor award of $25 for the outstanding 1954-55 senior thesis in the school of journalism.

Carol Eldridge and Mary Salazar, both seniors in journalism, received second awards of $12.50 each. Awards are usually given for second and third place but Miss Eldridge and Miss Salazar ended in a tie, according to Gordon A. Sabine, dean of the school of journalism.

Honorable mention students named were Richard Koe, Ted Goh and Jerry Harrell.

Cash prizes for the award are made through a fund established by T. Neil Taylor, 1931 University graduate in journalism.

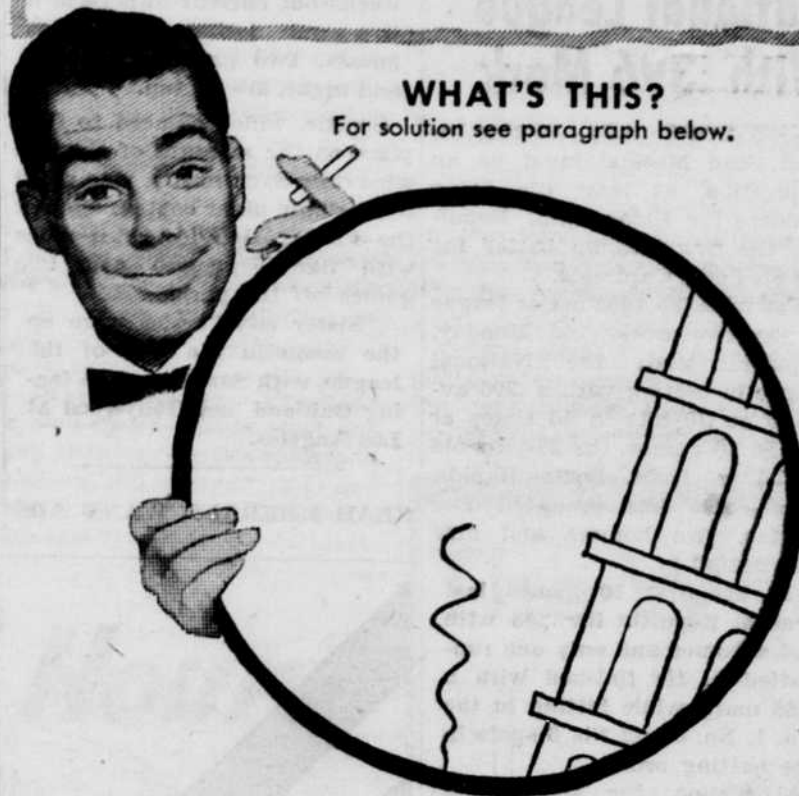

Weekend Tickets For Play Available

A WHOLE CABOODLE OF LUCKY DROODLES!

WHAT'S THIS?
For solution see paragraph below.

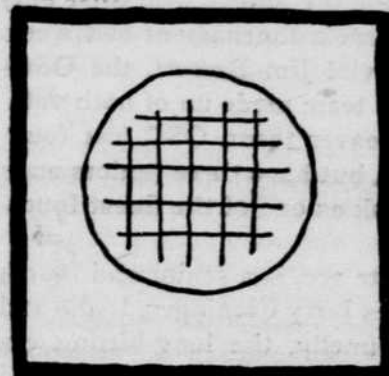

A WONDERFUL SLANT on smoking! You'll find it in the Doodle above, titled: Tourist enjoying better-tasting Lucky Strike while leaning against tower of Pisa. If your own inclination is toward better taste, join the many college smokers who prefer Luckies. From any angle, Luckies taste better. They taste better, first of all, because Lucky Strike means fine tobacco. Then that tobacco is toasted to taste better. "It's Toasted"—the famous Lucky Strike process—tones up Luckies' light, good-tasting tobacco to make it taste even better. Little wonder that Luckies tower above all other brands in college popularity!
