

One Will Be President ...

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES ... Sam Vahey, left, UIS, and Bud Hinkson, right, AGS, elaborate on party platforms and other party issues at ASUO-sponsored coffee hour Wednesday.

'Darkhorse' Senator To Run in Elections

A darkhorse candidate has entered the race for a senator-at-large post in the coming all-campus general election.

Fred Hogg, junior in business, turned in a petition to ASUO Vice-President Hollis Ransom Tuesday and will run in the election on a non-partisan basis. He will be competing against nine aspirants from the Associated Greek Students and nine others from the United Independent Students. A total of nine senators will be elected.

Hogg, who lives at Hale Kane, was the winner of the recent "ugliest man on campus" contest.

Ransom reported that anyone who was defeated in the primary election or was not otherwise nominated may still get their name on the ballot by filing a petition by Friday noon.

Friday is also the deadline for nominees to have their names withdrawn from the ballot. In case anyone drops out the name of the person who was last defeated for that position will be placed on the ballot as nominee.

Hatch Tells of Mexican Art In Browsing Room Lecture

By Joan Kraus
Emerald Reporter

"Art of Mexico is art of all the emigrants from the 16th century on," said David Hatch, instructor in art, in his browsing room lecture held last night in the Student Union.

The topic of the lecture was "A Survey of the Art of Mexico." The lecture was illustrated by colored slides which showed Indian and modern sites.

Hatch said that "architecture is a craft with the emphasis on utility. Many of the pyramids in Spain were bases for temples which have decayed away. They differ from the Egyptian pyramids in that they have rubble inside of them and are faced with brick. They weren't built as a monument to the dead."

"Many of the sites were thoroughly plundered by the Spanish," Hatch said in his lecture for which there was standing room only.

Hatch has studied in Europe and in Mexico. His specialty is in metal workings, pottery and weaving. The slides, which were taken by him in Mexico last summer.

Discussion leader for the evening was W. S. Laughlin, associate professor of anthropology.

Oregana Will Have Late Sales

Seniors and other students who have not yet purchased Oreganas will have a final opportunity to do so May 2-6 and May 9-13.

This "last chance sale" will end Oregana sales for the year. The yearbooks may be ordered at the Oregana business office.

Men's Pledge Cards To Be Signed Friday

Men pledging a fraternity this term must sign the official inter-fraternity council pledge card at the office of student affairs by 3 p.m. Friday or their pledge will be invalid.

Rushes must be accompanied by a member of the fraternity they are pledging, who will serve as a witness.

Senate Agenda

A hearing of the rifle team request for an allocation from student fees will be the first item on tonight's Senate agenda. The senators will convene for their final meeting at 6:30 p.m.

Also on the agenda will be:

- A report on the athletic hall of fame by Art Litchman.
- Announcement of the essay contest winner.
- Mother's Weekend progress report.
- Primary election report.
- Recommendation for yell king.
- Final report on the chimes.
- Comprehensive canoe fete report.
- Announcement of the ASUO banquet, May 11.

Fraternities Begin Bleacher Building

Tuesday's inclement weather did not stop the beginning of bleacher construction for the Canoe Fete.

Pledges and members of Sigma Nu started the project during the morning Tuesday, and men from Lambda Chi Alpha worked all afternoon.

Jerry Maxwell, chairman of the Fete's property set-up committee, reported Tuesday night that he was pleased with the "fine work and co-operation of the two houses."

Maxwell stated that the metal framework for more than 1100 bleacher seats was put up by the two houses.

Originally, construction of the first bank of bleachers was to have been completed by Saturday evening. With the present progress, Maxwell feels, the project will be completed by this evening.

Pledges and members of Theta Chi and Delta Upsilon are scheduled to work today. Art Weatherword and Jim Martin, respectively, are representatives for the houses.

Agreement In Hour Session

By Bob Robinson

Emerald Assistant News Editor

The University's political titans locked horns Wednesday afternoon and after a 60-minute question and answer session most of an interested audience was in agreement that both were worthy candidates.

The two politicians, ASUO presidential aspirants Sam Vahey of the United Independent Students and Bud Hinkson of the Associated Greek Students, were pretty much in agreement in answering most of the questions posed by the audience of approximately 60 students in the Student Union coffee hour forum.

In fact, on only two discussion points did the two candidates completely oppose each other. As a result most of the session was spent with the two hopefuls explaining and answering questions on these points.

Greek Week?

The first of the controversial two was the question of the future of Greek Week on the campus. Hinkson expressed the feeling of the Greeks when he said, "Greek Week is not designed for all students but is patterned strictly for the fun of the Greeks."

Vahey, objecting to the way that the event was handled on campus this year, stated that "Bud is right in saying Greek Week is none of our business, but when the festivity begins to affect other students on campus it is time for student government to intervene."

Vahey was careful to point out that he had no objections to the week as a yearly activity but he said that "this year many of the freshmen girls were hurt, some of them even cried to their counselors, because they felt they were being left out."

The UIS candidate suggested that a possible solution would be to "let all students take part in the Greek Week activities."

Second Disagreement

The other point on which the two came into conflict was on the matter of the campus open primary election.

Hinkson, supporting the AGS platform stand for its discontinuance, said that he believed "the open primary and cross-voting definitely causes apathy in student government."

The stocky AGS aspirant went on to say that he couldn't "see much sense in having campus political parties other than for the excitement around election time."

Vahey Favors Primary

Vahey took exactly the opposite stand. He emphasized that he favored the open primary "at least until some better system

Answer Friday—Or Files Will Go

Every house on campus must have an answer concerning their group's reaction to the ASUO test files by noon Friday or the files will be discontinued.

This was the decision of Loris Larson, chairman, and members of the Senate test files committee. House reactions as to whether or not they should be discontinued may be placed in the ASUO suggestion box in the Co-op. Each should bear the name of the living organization represented.
