They quoted the students as saying they phoned a threat to Jefferson high school "as a joke."

Jefferson received such threats two successive days. The building was evacuated the first time, and a half-day of school was lost. There was no interruption of classes the second time.

Jack Edwards, school superintendent, blamed students for making the fake threats, and said, "We're going to have to stop" evacuating schools.

Roosevelt high, the fourth school to receive such a threat, was the school evacuated Wednesday. No bomb was found inside and students went back to classes after a half-hour.

The three arrested students were held for juvenile court.

A wave of fake bomb threats to schools, hotels and business firms has followed the bombing of a Portland department store in a $50,000 extortion plot a little more than a week ago.

•Stock Market•

NEW YORK (AP)—A brief burst of selling Wednesday in the stock market sent prices down, but there was good recovery from the lowest prices.

Historian Will Lecture Friday

Boyd C. Shafer, editor of the American Historical Review and executive secretary of the American Historical association, is visiting on campus today and Friday.

He will lecture on "Nationalism: Myth and Reality" on Friday at 11 a.m. in 138 Commonwealth.

Shafer will speak informally on "Random Notes of an Editor" to interested faculty members and students at a luncheon in the Student Union today.

He will meet this evening at 8 p.m. with graduate students in history and the social sciences at 2475 Van Ness St. and will be available for consultation at other times today and Friday.

"Nationalism: Myth and Reality" is also the title of a book that Shafer recently had published.

President Candidates Agree on Many Issues

is found. We ought to continue the present set-up in lieu of an improved suggestion."

He also said he thought that "the present party system in student government is necessary in order to give students a way to express divided feelings. If the open primary were eliminated it would practically ruin the two-party system on campus."

Two other items were thoroughly discussed and on both of them the two candidates were in almost hearty agreement.

Keep the Canoe Fete

As to the future of the mill race and the Canoe Fete, Hinkson said that he is "eager to see the Canoe Fete continue as a yearly event and I favor at least a partial restoration of the mill race to its former status." He was quick to point out that it is "utterly impossible" to make it the same as it was many years ago because of the prohibitive cost.

Vahey expressed about the same opinion on the matter, saying that "I don't think it is necessary to put anything about it on the party platform because in a sense it is a concern of all University students rather than of any political group."

A recommendation for the continuance of the Canoe Fete and the restoration of the mill race is one of the planks on the AGS platform.

Both of the candidates said that they are in favor of seeing some improvements in the legislative and executive branches of student government.

Hinkson's suggestion for an improvement was "to set up standing committees consisting of members of the ASUO Senate which could deal with student body problems with which they are more familiar and suggest solutions for them."

Cabinet . . . Maybe

Vahey said that he agreed that an investigation such as this would be a good thing but that he thought that committee outside of the senate would be proper to handle senate work. Hinkson had said earlier that "the cabinet is too busy with other duties to handle such a job."

During the program Vahey revealed three changes he planned to make if he is elected president. He said he didn't approve of the idea of "sending flyers out in an effort to reach students with government problems."

He also said he favored "the discontinuance of the student government essay contest." In addition he took variance with the senate's vote to abolish the Senior Ball.

'We Want a Chance'

"Being a senior next year, I think that my class ought to be given a chance to make the ball a success," he said.

Hinkson was asked at one point during the meeting if he planned to support the whole student body if elected or just AGS. He replied that "I expect to support the whole student body. Even though the AGS platform is advantageous to the organization, it is not harmful to other students."

During the program ASUO President Bob Summers introduced other candidates in this year's election who were in attendance. Only three AGS candidates were there—Anne Ritchey, Bob Roy and Jim Lynch. Nine UIS aspirants were in attendance—Mary Claire Allen, Bob Biggs, Dorothy Iler, Kathleen Morrison, Dave Lobb, Richard McDaniel, Roger Sommer, Kip Wharton and Sam Frear.

Many Exhibits Set for Weekend

Special displays will be shown by several University departments during Junior Weekend. The displays will be shown on May 14.

The chemistry department is planning to have experiments in organic chemistry going on Saturday. The math department will have their calculating machines in action and the art gallery is going to have paintings on display for the weekend.

Students are again reminded to write their mothers, inviting them to the festivities. Letters should be written immediately so that mothers can make reservations for their stay in Eugene. A housing list will be sent to the living organizations.
